Spectators overflow courtroom for Dr. Garrison's murder trial

BLOOMFIELD— Spectators overflowed the Stoddard County Circuit Court room Wednesday, speculating and sometimes softly discussing the case as the state built its case against Dr. Norman A. Garrison, who is charged with first-degree murder in connection with the death of his former wife, Lee Ann Garrison, in Kennett on Sept. 8, 1974.

Judge Rex Henson of Poplar Bluff, who is hearing the change of venue case from Dunklin County, planned to finish the state's presentation Wednesday night, but one of the state's attorneys, Charles M. Cable of Kennett, became ill and the proceedings were continued until today.

Dunklin County Prosecuting Attorney Charles Baker said he plans to call two more witnesses for the state today and will do the questioning himself if Cable remains ill.

Much of the testimony Wednesday was supplied by laboratory technicians who conducted tests on items of evidence related to the case, starting with Sgt. Gene Duckworth, who was the Missouri State Highway Patrol officer in charge of the investigation at the scene.

Duckworth said he was shown a bloody fingerprint on top of a fence in the back yard of the Garrison house by Cpl. Jackie Crawford.

The print was in a patch of dried blood, a thin film about three to four inches wide and dark red in color. Duckworth said it was just a partial print, then explained the procedure of lifting a print as he demonstrated it and verified that a fingerprint card presented to him Wednesday was the same one he prepared on Sept. 8, 1974.

On Sept. 10, 1974, Duckworth said he was called to the Garrison house again after a bloody footprint had been found in the house. He took pictures of that footprint and another partial print near it.

On Sept. 11, he took a blood sample from the print and dusted it with fingerprint powder who was unsuccessful in his attempt to lift it.

He echoed what several other officers had testified Tuesday, that he did not see the print on Sept. 8 and first saw it when his attention was called to it on Sept. 10.

Highway Patrol Sgt. Don Shelton testified Tuesday that Charles Wilson, Mrs. Garrison's brother, was given free rein in the house.

During cross-examination Wednesday, however, Duckworth didn't know if Wilson was allowed free rein; it wasn't his responsibility.

"Wasn't it peculiar that you and other trained officers for three days were not able to see a visible footprint?" the defense asked.

"Not when I went back and saw where it was," Duckworth replied. "It was difficult to see on the black tile."

He was surprised, however, to hear of a bloody footprint being found, he said.

"Was it because you had investigated the area and hadn't seen it?" the defense asked.

"Yes," Duckworth said.

He said he examined the footprint, which appeared to be made by a sock foot, and there was some conversation about the fact that one toe seemed to be missing.

The defense then had Garrison take his shoe off and demonstrate that all of his toes touched the floor.

When asked a number of questions by the defense about the fingerprint found on the fence, Duckworth said he had no clearcut theory about how such a print could be made. However, he said that to his knowledge, it is not possible to forge fingerprints.

He testified that three blood types were found in the room, with B type blood on one wall, type A on another, types A and O on a blanket, type A (the victim's type) in the footprint and on the stairway, type A on a holster found in the room, types A and B on the bedroom carpet and a trail of type B blood from the bedroom to the back door.

A surgical glove, found in a yard adjoining the back yard of the Garrison house, had type O blood on it.

A drop of blood on Mrs. Garrison's left thigh was found to be type B. Dr. Garrison has type O blood.

Duckworth also testified that his investigation showed that a woman had visited the Garrison house the night of the murder.

Kathy Richardson, cousin of Mrs. Garrison, testified that she had seen Garrison make footprints like the one found in the Garrison home as many as 25 times when they had gone swimming.

The defense attorneys again had Garrison take his shoe off and demonstrate that all his toes touched the floor. She admitted the toes were touching now, but that it was different the other times she had seen them.

Dr. Steve Morris, a research scientist at University of Missouri-Columbia, who made some tests on the surgical glove and residue found on Mrs. Garrison's hands, said he came to the conclusion that she had recently handled or fired a gun but tests on the glove were inconclusive.

Don Gray, a laboratory technician who performed some tests on hair from Mrs. Garrison and hair found in her hand, said that while he was not qualified to draw conclusions, the chemical makeup was different, indicating they could have come from different sources.

Another technician, Terry Baxter, who wrote the final report based on Gray's tests, said he concluded that there was a large enough difference in the chemical makeup to make it inconclusive.

Dr. Robert Ahlvin, who performed an autopsy on the body, testified that Mrs. Garrison had been shot in the back of the head; and Thomas Buel, a highway patrol forensic chemist, said the bullet was probably .22-caliber.

Dr. Pin H. Pu estimated the time of death between 8 and 9 a.m. Sept. 8, 1974, but warned he could not be exact and Ahlvin warned that other factors could throw the estimate off.

Both doctors agreed that the cause of death was the gunshot wound to the head.

Buel reported that he photographed the latent print and a print from Dr. Garrison's fingerprint card for presentation in court and, in his opinion, they match.

Buel also said a pistol grip found in a yard near the Garrison house and a small piece of plastic found in the bedroom where the murder took place matched and was characteristic of a Harrington and Richards revolver.

Under cross examination, he said the .22-caliber bullet found in the body of Mrs. Garrison was not compared to a pistol from Summerville, Tenn., nor was he requested to make such a test.

Dr. Robert Briner, director of the Southeast Missouri Regional Crime Laboratory at Cape Girardeau, said he made several blood typing tests and that, on one item found in the bedroom, there were two distinct blood types— A and O— and that on another he found both A and B types, leading him to speculate it was type AB blood.

He said under cross examination that he was not asked to subgroup the blood samples.

Toward the end of Wednesday's proceedings-- the third day of the trial-- the prosecution called two witnesses to the stand who claimed they heard Garrison threaten Mrs. Garrison.

Jerry Stillman, an attorney who represented Mrs. Garrison during proceedings for her January 1974 divorce from Garrison, said Wednesday that during a discussion of alimony payments in his office, Garrison told her that she would not live long enough to collect it.

Sue Austir an office nurse employed for 16 years by Mrs. Garrison's father, Dr. Loys Wilson, also testified she heard Garrison threaten Mrs. Garrison.

Warrant issued for 3 murder suspects

NEW MADRID — A warrant for the arrest of three Michigan men of Mexican descent— suspected for first-degree murder and first- degree robbery in connection with the shooting death of Kathleen Marie Evans, 17, during a holdup Friday night at a Marston service station— was issued Wednesday afternoon in New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

Named in the warrant are Fred Cruz Garcia, age unavailable, Reyes B. Barrera, 25, and his brother, Eduardo Barrera, 23, according to New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Willis "Bo" Wingo, who said the men are also suspects in a murder and armed robbery in Beaver Dam, Wis.

Garcia is in custody in Houston, Tex., and the Barrera brothers were still at large Wednesday afternoon.

Wingo said the sheriff's department and highway patrol had received information Wednesday morning from the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Houston, following Garcia's arrest, that he reportedly had given information linking the three to the armed robbery and shooting at Marston.

Reportedly, Garcia alleged that he and the Barrera brothers were en route from Wisconsin to Texas and that they had stopped at a service station, either in Missouri or Illinois, where a girl attendant had serviced the car.

According to the information from the FBI, Garcia allegedly reported that one of the brothers got out of the car and followed the girl into the station, where he shot her and took the money from the cash register.

Garcia reportedly has stated that the Barerra brothers are armed with a sawed-off .410- gauge shotgun and were traveling in a blue 1969 Chrysler bearing Michigan license JKP351, which is registered to Reyes B. Barrera of Adrian, Mich.

Wingo said the men, who apparently had been working in Michigan and Wisconsin, are suspected of the armed robbery and murder of a liquor store attendant about 11:45 a.m. Friday in Beaver Dam.

Witnesses there reportedly had spotted the car leaving the scene and were able to give police a description of it. Information had also been received that Garcia was going to Houston.

The body of the Evans girl, who had been shot once in the left chin at close range with a shotgun, was found at 11:45 p.m. Friday behind a counter in Martin's Phillips 66 Service Station, located at the Interstate 55 and Route EE interchange near Marston. It was reported that $72.83 had been taken from the cash register and eight gallons of gas had not been paid for.

Elderly meet with city council in support of proposed addition

A group of 19 elderly people met with the City Council Wednesday afternoon to voice their support for proposals of an addition to the Heritage House dining room and a transportation system for senior citizens funded with Community Development Grant money.

The City Council deferred final action on a Community Development grant application until the Nov. 1 meeting.

Sikeston is eligible for up to $500,000 in federal money through the grant program. The funds must be used to improve low and moderate income areas.

The city will be in its third year of funding in the program, if it is approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

City Manager Charles Church said he believes the Council is in support of the Heritage House and transportation proposals.

The Heritage House addition would cost about $50,000 and would ease the overcrowding in the dining room.

The transportation system would cost about $4,500, as the city's share of the federal program, which provides free transportation to the elderly. The existing program, which provides transportation for a nominal fee, is being phased out by the government.

Church said the council also favors eliminating the Lillian Street paving project from the grant proposal, reducing the housing rehabilitation program by $10,000, substituting a tennis court and other recreational equipment at the Robert Rowe Park and a $3,000 sanitary sewer project in the Sunset Addition.

The sewer project would serve an area just below the hill west of Alabama Street, the only area in Sikeston not currently served by sanitary sewers.

Church said the council appears to be in favor of retaining Ables Road, the Kiwanis and Smith street paving projects, and the additional storm sewer construction work on Applegate Street.

The council voted to add one more holiday for city employes -- the Friday following Thanksgiving.

The council took the action after Church said the Board of Municipal Utilities had added that day to its holiday schedule. City employes are now nearly equal with board employes on holiday vacations. City employes work an extra one-half day on New Years Eve, Church said.

Snow found to be guilty of murder

NEW MADRID — J.B. Snow, 54, of Caruthersville was found guilty of second-degree murder Wednesday by a New Madrid County Circuit Court jury, which set punishment at 15 years in custody of the state Department of Corrections.

The case had been transferred from Pemiscot County, where Snow was charged with the shooting death on Jan. 24 of Larry "Wolf" Ford, 27. The shooting occurred at the Bel-Air Cafe in Caruthersville when the men became involved in a dispute over some money.

Snow had claimed self-defense in the shooting.

Ford died of multiple gunshot wounds while en route to Pemiscot County Medical Center at Hayti.

After hearing the verdict, Judge William L. Ragland, who presided during the trial, told the jury he thought they had reached a proper verdict and thanked the members for their service.

He also informed the jury that Prosecuting Attorney Mike Hazel had filed an injunction against the Bel-Air Cafe as a public nuisance and that it has been padlocked for several months.

The cafe, which had been operated by Snow, was notorious for its gambling room.

Price increase slows to .4% in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose four-tenths of a per cent in September as grocery costs declined for the first time in six months, helping offset increases for other goods and services, the government said today.

The over-all rise in the consumer price index translates into an annual inflation rate of about 4.9 per cent, a level in line with the basic underlying rate of inflation in the economy of 5 to 6 per cent.

September's rise follows increases of five-tenths of a per cent in each of the previous three months.

While inflation eased slightly last month, the Labor Department said the purchasing power of the average worker's paycheck continued to shrink. The department said real earnings — what's left of salary after deductions for taxes and adjusted for inflation — declined fivetenths of a per cent last month.

The price report was the final major economic statistic to be released before the November elections.

President Ford has claimed that his economic policies have helped cut the inflation rate to half of its 1974 levels, while Democrat Jimmy Carter has charged that the current rate still is twice as high as when the Democrats were in office.

Consumer prices surged 12.2 per cent in 1974 and slowed to 7 per cent in 1975. Over the past 12 months, prices have risen 5.8 per cent.

But for Americans accustomed to price increases averaging about 2 per cent a year through much of the post+World War II period, the current rate is high.

Over-all, the Consumer Price Index stood at 172.6 in September, meaning a market basket of goods and services costing $100 in 1967 now costs $172.60.

Grocery prices declined in September one-tenth of a per cent after seasonal adjustment, the first decline since March when they fell eight-tenths of a per cent.

Pork and poultry prices declined sharply as they have in recent months. Beef prices also fell but by less than in July or August, the Labor Department said.

Prices of cereal and bakery products dropped for the first time since March, and sugar prices declined sharply. But prices for fresh vegetables, dairy products and coffee continued to increase.

The over-all food index, which includes prices of both store-bought food and restaurant meals, was unchanged in September, following three months of relatively small increases.

Prices for non-food commodities rose four-tenths of a per cent last month, compared with increases of six-tenths of a per cent during the spring and summer months and threetenths of a per cent early in the year.

Suits taken in burglary

CHARLESTON — Ten suits valued at $499.60 were taken during a burglary at Wigdor's Discount Center, 107 Center St., sometime between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Entry was made by removing boards covering a window on the second floor of the north side of the building.

Police are investigating the incident, reported at 3:43 p.m. Wednesday.

6 hurt in area accidents

Six people were injured-- two seriously-- in four area accidents Wednesday, the highway patrol said today.

A Wyatt man was seriously injured in a single-vehicle accident at 3:40 p.m. on a gravel road three miles east of Wyatt.

The patrol said Albert Reed, 66, of Wyatt, traveling west in a pickup truck, lost control of the truck, drove off the road and struck a tree head-on. He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Two persons were injured at 1 p.m. in a collision on a township road two miles east of Essex.

Ricky Hill, 26, of Essex, driver of a northbound car was seriously injured and Edward Pope Jr., 16, of Dexter, driver of an eastbound car, received minor injuries when Pope's car struck Hill's in the left side at an unmarked intersection. Both were taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Brenda Mae Maness, 26, of Wyatt received minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 6:05 p.m., which occurred in the northbound lane of Interstate 55 at Route AA overpass, two miles south of Sikeston.

A two-car accident at 6:40 p.m. at the Junction of Highways 67 and 160 in Butler County caused minor injuries to both drivers.

The patrol said a northbound car driven by Jenny Mae Hood, 26, of O'Fallon pulled from Highway 160 onto Highway 67 and struck nearly head-on a car driven south by Virginia Louise Rideout, 19, of Harviell Route One.

The Hood woman was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff and the Rideout woman was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Absentee ballots are available

Applications for absentee ballots are now available at the City Administrative Building for the $250 million revenue bond issue to be on the Nov. 2 ballot, according to City Clerk Lynn Lancaster.

The bond issue will pay for a steam plant to meet Sikeston's projected electrical needs through the year 2,000.

Thieves steal radios

Four citizen band radios, a purse and tools were reported taken in thefts, the Department of Public Safety said today.

Chandos McRill, 555 Park Ave., reported the theft of a CB from his car sometime Tuesday or Wednesday while the vehicle was parked at his house.

Robert Henley, 102 Foust Drive, reported the theft of a CB from his pickup truck parked in his driveway between 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday.

A CB was taken from a van truck belonging to Jay DeJournett, 122 Thomas Drive, between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday while the van was parked at his home. The CB was valued at $200. A tool box and tools worth $250 were also taken.

Vyron Fodge, 812 Vernon St., reported the theft of a CB worth $100 from his car Tuesday or Wednesday. The car was parked at his house.

A tool box and assorted tools worth $39 and a glass jar containing $10 in change was taken from the trunk of his car parked at his home between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 12:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Lena Hahr, 222 Dorothy St., told officers that her purse containing about $30 and personal papers was taken from her home about 3 p.m. Tuesday after she stepped out the back door for a few minutes.

She reported the theft Wednesday afternoon after searching the house to make sure it was not misplaced.

Crane overturns capsized ferry

LULING, La. (AP) — A giant floating crane today righted the Mississippi River ferry that capsized after a collision that left up to 82 river commuters dead, but the ferry remained partially submerged.

Efforts continued to bring the ferry to the surface even as divers stood by on the the shore to resume to search for bodies.

Sheriff's officers said 22 bodies were recovered in the hours after the collision, many of them still trapped in cars that were aboard the ferry.

The bodies of many of the missing were believed trapped in the ferry or sunk in the 10 feet of mud on the river bottom, officials said..

Laboring through the nigmt, workmen on the floating crane attached lines to the 120-by-55-foot ferry, which had settled upside down with its rusted hull protruding after it was rammed by the 664-foot Norwegian tanker Frosta.

Eighteen persons survived the collision, but it was unknown exactly how many were on the George Prince ferry when it was hit broadside just before dawn Wednesday.

Many of the dead were factory workers en route to jobs on the west bank from Destrahan and other east-bank towns about 20 miles upriver from New Orleans.

Some passengers were on foot, but others had remained in their cars with windows rolled up to keep out the cold.

The impact of the collision dumped cars and screaming passengers into the cold, swift water, which reached depths of 80 feet.

Divers searching for survivors on Wednesday reported hearing tapping from the hull, but found only bodies bumping around.

No one was injured aboard the Frosta, which was empty and was heading to Baton Rouge to take on cargo. The freighter remained anchored a mile and a half upstream while the Coast Guard launched an investigation of the accident. The cause of the collision was undertermined.

Sheriff John St. Amant estimated from reports of missing persons from factories and homes in the area that 96 passengers were on the ferry. But he said later that the total probably exceeded 100.

"We don't have any idea," said Deputy Sheriff Wallace Friloux of St. Charles Parish. "There were 30 to 35 autos aboard, with from one to four or five people per car. And we don't know how many foot passengers were aboard."

"We saw the ship moving up the river, and the ship blowed its whistle for the ferry four or five times, but the ferry just kept going," said Jerry Mayo, a worker on a sister ferry that rescued many of the survivors.

A Coast Guard official said that unless there are special circumstances, a small boat such as a ferry usually is expected to yield right-of-way to a larger vessel.

P.J. Breaud, whose pickup truck barely miused being able to squeeze on the ferry, said he watched from the bank as the Norwegian ship moved upstream in the early morning gloom.

He said later that it was hard to tell what happened because "it was dark and it happened so fast." But he said, "To my knowledge, the ship blew six times, three blasts twice."

Snow found to be guilty of murder

NEW MADRID — J.B. Snow, 54, of Caruthersville was found guilty of second-degree murder Wednesday by a New Madrid County Circuit Court jury, which set punishment at 15 years in custody of the state Department of Corrections.

The case had been transferred from Pemiscot County, where Snow was charged with the shooting death on Jan. 24 of Larry "Wolf" Ford, 27. The shooting occurred at the Bel-Air Cafe in Caruthersville when the men became involved in a dispute over some money.

Snow had claimed self-defense in the shooting.

Ford died of multiple gunshot wounds while en route to Pemiscot County Medical Center at Hayti.

After hearing the verdict, Judge William L. Ragland, who presided during the trial, told the jury he thought they had reached a proper verdict and thanked the members for their service.

He also informed the jury that Prosecuting Attorney Mike Hazel had filed an injunction against the Bel-Air Cafe as a public nuisance and that it has been padlocked for several months.

The cafe, which had been operated by Snow, was notorious for its gambling room.

Price increase slows to .4% in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose four-tenths of a per cent in September as grocery costs declined for the first time in six months, helping offset increases for other goods and services, the government said today.

The over-all rise in the consumer price index translates into an annual inflation rate of about 4.9 per cent, a level in line with the basic underlying rate of inflation in the economy of 5 to 6 per cent.

September's rise follows increases of five-tenths of a per cent in each of the previous three months.

While inflation eased slightly last month, the Labor Department said the purchasing power of the average worker's paycheck continued to shrink. The department said real earnings — what's left of salary after deductions for taxes and adjusted for inflation — declined fivetenths of a per cent last month.

The price report was the final major economic statistic to be released before the November elections.

President Ford has claimed that his economic policies have helped cut the inflation rate to half of its 1974 levels, while Democrat Jimmy Carter has charged that the current rate still is twice as high as when the Democrats were in office.

Consumer prices surged 12.2 per cent in 1974 and slowed to 7 per cent in 1975. Over the past 12 months, prices have risen 5.8 per cent.

But for Americans accustomed to price increases averaging about 2 per cent a year through much of the post+World War II period, the current rate is high.

Over-all, the Consumer Price Index stood at 172.6 in September, meaning a market basket of goods and services costing $100 in 1967 now costs $172.60.

Grocery prices declined in September one-tenth of a per cent after seasonal adjustment, the first decline since March when they fell eight-tenths of a per cent.

Pork and poultry prices declined sharply as they have in recent months. Beef prices also fell but by less than in July or August, the Labor Department said.

Prices of cereal and bakery products dropped for the first time since March, and sugar prices declined sharply. But prices for fresh vegetables, dairy products and coffee continued to increase.

The over-all food index, which includes prices of both store-bought food and restaurant meals, was unchanged in September, following three months of relatively small increases.

Prices for non-food commodities rose four-tenths of a per cent last month, compared with increases of six-tenths of a per cent during the spring and summer months and threetenths of a per cent early in the year.

Six people were injured-- two seriously-- in four area accidents Wednesday, the highway patrol said today.

The patrol said Albert Reed, 66, of Wyatt, traveling west in a pickup truck, lost control of the truck, drove off the road and struck a tree head-on. He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Two persons were injured at 1 p.m. in a collision on a township road two miles east of Essex.

Ricky Hill, 26, of Essex, driver of a northbound car was seriously injured and Edward Pope Jr., 16, of Dexter, driver of an eastbound car, received minor injuries when Pope's car struck Hill's in the left side at an unmarked intersection. Both were taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Brenda Mae Maness, 26, of Wyatt received minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 6:05 p.m., which occurred in the northbound lane of Interstate 55 at Route AA overpass, two miles south of Sikeston.

A two-car accident at 6:40 p.m. at the Junction of Highways 67 and 160 in Butler County caused minor injuries to both drivers.

The patrol said a northbound car driven by Jenny Mae Hood, 26, of O'Fallon pulled from Highway 160 onto Highway 67 and struck nearly head-on a car driven south by Virginia Louise Rideout, 19, of Harviell Route One.

The Hood woman was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff and the Rideout woman was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Vyron Fodge, 812 Vernon St., reported the theft of a CB worth $100 from his car Tuesday or Wednesday. The car was parked at his house.

A tool box and assorted tools worth $39 and a glass jar containing $10 in change was taken from the trunk of his car parked at his home between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 12:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Lena Hahr, 222 Dorothy St., told officers that her purse containing about $30 and personal papers was taken from her home about 3 p.m. Tuesday after she stepped out the back door for a few minutes.

She reported the theft Wednesday afternoon after searching the house to make sure it was not misplaced.

Crane overturns capsized ferry

Efforts continued to bring the ferry to the surface even as divers stood by on the the shore to resume to search for bodies.

Sheriff's officers said 22 bodies were recovered in the hours after the collision, many of them still trapped in cars that were aboard the ferry.

The bodies of many of the missing were believed trapped in the ferry or sunk in the 10 feet of mud on the river bottom, officials said.

Laboring through the nigmt, workmen on the floating crane attached lines to the 120-by-55-foot ferry, which had settled upside down with its rusted hull protruding after it was rammed by the 664-foot Norwegian tanker Frosta.

Eighteen persons survived the collision, but it was unknown exactly how many were on the George Prince ferry when it was hit broadside just before dawn Wednesday.

Many of the dead were factory workers en route to jobs on the west bank from Destrahan and other east-bank towns about 20 miles upriver from New Orleans.

Some passengers were on foot, but others had remained in their cars with windows rolled up to keep out the cold.

The impact of the collision dumped cars and screaming passengers into the cold, swift water, which reached depths of 80 feet.

Divers searching for survivors on Wednesday reported hearing tapping from the hull, but found only bodies bumping around.

No one was injured aboard the Frosta, which was empty and was heading to Baton Rouge to take on cargo. The freighter remained anchored a mile and a half upstream while the Coast Guard launched an investigation of the accident. The cause of the collision was undertermined.

Sheriff John St. Amant estimated from reports of missing persons from factories and homes in the area that 96 passengers were on the ferry. But he said later that the total probably exceeded 100.

"We don't have any idea," said Deputy Sheriff Wallace Friloux of St. Charles Parish. "There were 30 to 35 autos aboard, with from one to four or five people per car. And we don't know how many foot passengers were aboard."

"We saw the ship moving up the river, and the ship blowed its whistle for the ferry four or five times, but the ferry just kept going," said Jerry Mayo, a worker on a sister ferry that rescued many of the survivors.

A Coast Guard official said that unless there are special circumstances, a small boat such as a ferry usually is expected to yield right-of-way to a larger vessel.

P.J. Breaud, whose pickup truck barely miused being able to squeeze on the ferry, said he watched from the bank as the Norwegian ship moved upstream in the early morning gloom.

He said later that it was hard to tell what happened because "it was dark and it happened so fast." But he said, "To my knowledge, the ship blew six times, three blasts twice."

SPECIOUS SUIT

Famed Texas physician and heart surgery pioneer Dr. Denton Cooley has been named, together with various other defendants, in a $31 million malpractice suit filed by a former patient. Yes, you read it correctly: 31 million dollars.

It seems that in 1969, according to the UPI report, Cooley implanted a heart valve in the plaintiff, who does not contend that the operation was not necessary or was bungled. But in 1975 — six years later — she began experiencing symptoms similar to those she had had before the operation.

About this time, she was notified by Cooley that he had received reports of a number of failures of her particular type of valve and he urged her to return to Texas so he could replace it with an improved model.

This she did and this he did, by virtue of which fact she has a new complaint which only $31 million will cure — the mental distress and loss of money she suffered as a result of having to undergo a second operation.

Our medical- legal expertise and 10 cents used to be worth a cup of coffee. Today it takes 25 cents. But it is obvious from this story, even to a layman, that both professions have made enormous strides.

Why, not too many years prior to 1969, people with serious heart ailments seldom lived long enough to sue anybody.

REVEALING REPRESSIONS

Reviewing a biography of Mao Tse-tung shortly before the Chinese leader joined his illustrious ancestors, the Soviet news agency Tass revealed that 28 million Chinese perished as a result of "repressions by the Maoist regime."

According to the book, written by one Fedor Burlatski, 25 million Chinese were liquidated during the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s, two million during the establishment of communes and one million in a campaign against national minorities.

Why, this is two or three times the number of Russians who perished during the establishment of communism in the Soviet Union.

POLITICS AND SOCIAL SECURITY

While better remembered now for other things, Rep. Wilbur Mills (D-Ark.) deserves a special place in history for his assurances concerning the Social Security amendments of 1972.

"This legislation is financed on a conservative basis," said the then-chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means. "I can assure the membership that we will take in each year more than we are paying out." Whereupon the House, ever eager to raise the ante on Social Security, pushed through another hike in benefits--including an automatic escalator clause to keep payouts pushing upward.

Nothing could have been further from the truth than Mills' assertion. As a result of the action taken in '72, Social Security payments are now outstripping revenues by $4-billion-plus a year. The so-called "trust fund" of the system is being rapidly depleted, and the long-term deficit obligations are so colossal ($2.4 trillion, according to the Treasury Department), that nobody knows how they can or will be funded.

The result is a dawning perception of Social Security crisis. Government actuaries are scurrying about, attempting to devise a short-term remedy. Lobby groups are battling to put the runaway costs on somebody else, rather than on their particular clients. Economists are pondering methods for meeting the long-term crunch that will surely arrive within a generation. From any standpoint, it's a mess.

The problem with the 1972 amendment, as with so much else that happens in our spend-thrift capital, was that Congress didn't know what it was doing--in the most literal sense. It was operating with revenue estimates based on assumptions concerning demographic growth, productive expansion and consequent increase in taxable payrolls, all of which were wrong. The result income shortfall has put the system deeply in the red.

So as you listen to the many "campaign promises" from presidential and congressional candidates, just remember that the Social Security crisis is upon us--created by the jerry-built nature of the system and the foolish amendments of '72.

CONGRESSMEN usually refer to each other as "the Honorable Senator from ..." and "my distinguished opponent" when they are debating on the floor. But occasionally they allow their emotions to overcome their politeness. On one occasion, a Congressman from Indiana interrupted a speech by a Congressman from Ohio and called him a jackass. The Speaker of the House immediately ruled the remark unparliamentary and demanded an apology.

"I withdraw the unfortunate word, Mr. Speaker," said the offender, "but I insist that the gentleman is out of order."

"How am I out of order ?" angril shouted the other.

HOW REPRESENTATIVE WERE DEMO CONVENTION DELEGATES?

The Democrats are talking up the anti-Washington mood sweeping the country and Jimmy Carter won the nomination by speaking out against the "bureaucratic mess" in the Nation's Capital. But the majority of delegates who attended the convention in New York still turned out to believe in the role of Big Government.

Putting a set of questions to a cross-section of more than 400 delegates, the Washington Post discovered that 49 per cent favored bigger government with many services, versus 36 percent who wanted "smaller government with fewer services."

--62 per cent thought the government should make sure everyone has a job, while 31 per cent did not.

-- 81 per cent thought the Congress should begin a national health-care program, while 13 per cent said no.

-- 66 per cent said big industry should be broken up if their size impeded competition, while 25 per cent said no.

-- 74 per cent said they would like stricter gun control laws, while 21 per cent did not.

-- 59 per cent opposed state right-to-work laws, while 32 per cent favored them.

Without quite saying it, the Post suggested that those attending the convention did not quite represent the sentiments of the primary voters. Carter won his anti-Washington reputation berating the federal government and pledging to reduce 1,900 federal departments into "no more than 200, with a great savings in tax money."

"It was that proposal more than anything else," noted the Post, "that won him (Carter) his anti-Washington reputation.

"The platform, however, plays this subject down, merely calling matter-of-factly for adoption of such things as sunset laws to slenderize the government where possible...

"Even this endorsement of sunset laws is carefully qualified. It is all right with the Democrats to put the government on a kind of weight-watching program, the platform says, but that does not mean the 'abandonment of governmental responsibility for addressing national problems.'

"And the platform goes on, with no protest from Carter, to embrace all the main items on the liberal spending agenda these days--increased 'national economic planning,' 'federal programs to reduce adult unemployment to as close to 3 per cent as possible in the next four years,' 'comprehensive national health insurance,' and 'fundamental welfare reform.'"

WHO TAKES THE HIGH ROAD?

WASHINGTON— It has been traditional in most presidential campaigns that the men running for President take the high road and their running mates for Vice President take the low road. For some reason it hasn't happened this year.

I discovered this when I took the high road the other day and found a lonely traffic cop sitting in his car.

"You're the first person I've seen up here since the presidential campaign started," he said.

"Where is everybody?" I asked.

"I have no idea," he said. "They sent me up here after the political conventions just to make sure everything was all right. They told me to expect Ford and Carter and busloads of press and campaign aides and advance men. My job was to keep the traffic on the high road moving along. But I haven't had a thing to do."

I looked along the high road and it was completely empty. It was an eerie feeling. "You mean to say neither Carter nor Ford has used the high road once?"

"Nope," he said. "As far as I can tell from my radio they've both taken the low road. I don't understand it. The low road is made of dirt. It has ruts in it and is full of muck and mire. Why they'd want to take it when we have a beautiful concrete highway up here is beyond me."

"That's funny," I told the cop, "because Ford insisted only last week he was taking the high road, but Carter was taking the low road. Then Carter said he tried to take the high road, but Ford wouldn't let him. I wonder if they even know where the high road is."

"Oh, they know where it is, all right," the cop said. "In their nomination speeches they both promised to take it. Millions of people came up here to see them. But in spite of their vows neither man has seen fit to take it just once."

"Maybe their aides won't let them take it. Perhaps the people running Carter's and Ford's campaigns have told them that if they take the high road no one will vote for them. After all, there are a lot more people who live on the low road, and that's where the votes are."

"Well, they're wrong," the cop said. "The American people expect their Presidents to take the high road. That's why we went to so much expense to build it. Nobody likes to see the man they're going to elect as their leader for the next four yrars throwing mud and rocks at the other fellow. The low road was built for vice-presidential candidates only. That's why we didn't pave it."

"You have a point," I admitted. "As a matter of fact, I came up here on the high road in hopes of getting a glimpse of Ford an Carter myself."

"Well, don't hold your breath," the cop said. "I hear they're both taking the low road for their third debate. It's going to be messier than a stock car race. Listen, I have a police car radio stationed on the low road coming in."

"This is Car 99. The President's limousine is coming through the muck, and Carter's limousine is now trying to pass him. Carter is throwing a fistful of mud at Ford, and the President has just picked up some mire to sling at Carter. Should we intervene?"

Headquarters' voice came over the radio. "No, Car 99, it's not our business to interfere with the candidates. Just keep the low road clear so the television people can cover it."

"Roger! Dole is now throwing mud at Carter and Mondale, and Mondale is throwing garbage at Ford and Dole and Nixon."

"We've got you, Car 99. Do you need assistance?"

"Connally is throwing mud at Carter now, and Butz is throwing manure at anyone he can hit. We could use some help."

Headquarters came over the radio. "Car 76, come in Car 76."

"That's me!" the cop I was with said excitedly. "This is Car 76."

"What about the high road?" the cop asked.

"It doesn't look as if we'll need anyone up there -- at least not until after Election Day."

Bullets Bursting in Air:

Secret Mafia sit-down called to protect low profile billion-dollar rackets

NEW YORK— It's healthy for the soul to look back in anger. So, when mob bodies professionally ventilated by bullets began dropping around town, I called a couple of "fellows" and learned that the neatly trimmed down Mafia "family" of the late Tommy (Three Fingers Brown) Luchese had just had an emergency sit-down in East Harlem.

This is unusual in this electronic bugging age. The dons and capos don't often gather in one place. However, the Luchese crowd, the late Jimmy Hoffa's favorite clan, has no visible godfather from whom to take direction.

Mafia "family" life has been quiet in town. The Luchese dons have been working silently with a new "boss," according to the highest authorities, of the old Joe Banana's mob which the federals say was organized by the now retired Joe Bonanno who has exchanged the Arizona sun belt for his old gun belt.

The hood the Justice Department believes now to be Godfather of the Bananas band is 67-year-old ex-convict Carmine (Liol) Galente. He's been moving stealthily. Why throw one's weight or bullets around? Both families are from the Palermo and Castellamare del Golfo area of Sicily. And that's where the Mafia started.

So Galente and one Anthony (Tony Ducks, The Duke) Corallo, reputed acting leader of the Luchese operations, have been right friendly. And Pappadio was one of Tony Duck's good friends. (Another intimate was Jimmy Hoffa.) So, why stir the federals with shootings? Why bring in all the investigative newspeople?

And, after all, who on the inside would dare challenge such a Mafia combine?

The stakes literally are "in the billions" according to one of the nation's most famed prosecutors. The Luchese mob as been at it for decades. Specializing in garment firms, trucking, gambling and narcotics. And in subverting public officials – like planting one of their men in the U.S. Attorney's office in the Southern District here in the early '50s. And corrupting a New York state Supreme Court justice. And bribing one of ex-Mayor John Lindsay's close advisers.

Low profile operations are far more preferable than high decibel Mafia gunplay these days. The FBI, despite all the slings and arrows aimed at it, has been in highly successful deep throat operations here in cooperation with the Justice Department anti-racketeer strike forces. Some time ago they nailed Godfather Philip (Rusty) Rastelli, who was succeeded by Galente as head of the Bananas mob according to the authorities, for violation of the Hobbs anti-extortion act. He got 10 years and a $50,000 fine. Today he's in prison.

And then there is the virtually unknown James (Jimmy Nap) Napoli, the one-man Mafia family. He regularly has handled millions in his own three state gambling network – New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The other day Jimmy Nap got himself a five-year prison term and a $20,000 fine on illegal gambling charges. Evidence by courtesy of the FBI. Earlier Napoli had been charged with using an air freight forwarding firm to shake down the Singer Sewing Machine Co. But the case was stopped after the government presented is evidence. There were other things to do, it was said.

Jimmy Nap is considered the nation's biggest gambler. Other dons have come to him for advice. He's reputedly as powerful and important in the national network as any godfather in organized crime. He was never made an official member of any Mafia unit. He's an independent. And he was doing right well.

So with the FBI prowling all over the place, the big crime families -- most of them specialists in industrial and labor racketeering – have gone low key. Actually, if we talk in godfather images, the metropolitan New York-New Jersey area's five families are leaderless.

They're still big money-makers. Mistake that not. But times and the garment rag jungle and trucking have changed. One reason is the FBI's and the New York strike forces' deep infiltration of the mobs.

The Mafia godfathers had gotten too cocky. They had gunned each other. It's nice to read funny books about how the mob can't shoot straight. They can. They did.

Now Joe Colombo, still head of his tribe, is a vegetable with a bullet in the brain. Godfather of Godfathers, Carlo Gambino is ill and very quiet. The old Genovese mob has more dead chiefs, dead from lead poisoning, than live ones.

There no longer is an Eastern Mr. Big. The authorities believe that Galente has ambitions. But he's always in low profile. So there appeared to be no mob motive for the execution of the happy-go-lucky, big-money-in-the-pocket Pappadio.

That's why the Luchese family had an emergency reunion in East Harlem. Could it be an outsider they wondered. searching for power over the famed old crowds which still have control of billions of dollars of narcotics sales, real estate transactions, white-collar crime and labor and industrial racketeering -- and, truck hijacking?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Nixon Tapes Make a Comeback

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Those pernicious, all-hearing Nixon tapes are back again to haunt the GOP. The tapes seem to support John Dean's charge that in 1972 then-President Richard Nixon used Gerald Ford to help block an early Watergate investigation.

Even more troublesome, we have now established that Nixon purposely altered the tape transcripts to cover up Ford's possible role in stopping the late Rep. Wright Patman, D.-Tex., from investigating Watergate.

Patman was hot on the trail of the Watergate conspiracy before the 1972 election. He discovered, for example, how the Watergate money had been laundered in Mexico. But the White House brought pressure on his House Banking Committee to halt the probe dead in its tracks.

Ford has conceded that, as House Republican leader, he opposed the probe. But twice he has sworn that he acted on his own without any pressure from the White House. Former White House counsel John Dean has all but called him a liar. Dean now claims that he learned from two White House aides, William Timmons and Richard Cook, that they had consulted with Ford about derailing Patman.

Our own investigation doesn't disprove Ford's sworn testimony. But we have positively established that Nixon altered the transcripts in at least eight instances to conceal Ford's possible involvement. In each instance, Nixon appeared to believe that his staff would be in touch with Ford and that Ford would intervene.

On Sept. 15, 1972, for example, a worried Nixon discussed the Patman probe with aides. He wanted the investigation stopped, he told his aides. Then, referring to Ford, Nixon declared: "Jerry has really got to lead on this. He's got to really be ..."

Nixon was emphatic. He said Ford should be told: "Now goddamn it, get the hell over with this (ending the probe)." To stress the urgency, Nixon added: "I'm getting into this thing."

These statements were picked up by the hidden microphones in the Oval Office. But Nixon later deleted them from the transcripts.

At another point, Nixon suggested that Rep. William Widnall, R.-N.J., the top Republican on Patman's committee, was too weak to stall the investigation. "Put it down," instructed Nixon, "uh, Jerry should talk to Widnall and, uh, just brace him." This instruction was also deleted from the transcripts.

One of the most significant omissions involved Timmons, whom Dean identified as a go-between with Ford. Nixon said: "The game has to be played awful rough ... You'll follow through with ... Who will over there? Who ... Timmons, or with Ford." This reference to Ford and Timmons was also struck out of the transcripts.

On another part of the tape, Nixon questioned whether Ford could "do anything with Patman." Again, Nixon stated that Ford has "got to know" that Nixon personally wanted the probe killed. Dean acknowledged, according to the tapes, that Ford would be advised Nixon was personally behind the request. These embarrassing remarks, too, were deleted.

There is clear evidence, in short, that Nixon censored the references to Ford from the transcript. This doesn't necessarily mean that Nixon's instructions to his staff were carried out. It is always possibble, as Ford insists, that they never spoke to him about the probe. It should also be noted that Ford had nothing to do with editing the transcripts. It wasn't Ford but Nixon who was responsible for the deletions.

Footnote: Timmons and Cook both deny that they talked with Ford about killing the Patman investigation. We have been unable to get any comment from Nixon.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE: The special prosecutor has now cleared President Ford of illegally pocketing or diverting any funds from the maritime unions. As additional evidence that the maritime unions have no hold on him, we have learned that they brought tremendous pressure on him to sign a 1974 bill requiring that a percentage of oil imports had to be carried on U.S. ships. The unions' friends on Capitol Hill even threatened to hold up Ford legislation if he didn't sign the bill. Nevertheless, the President vetoed the bill.

— Not long ago, Transportation Secretary William Coleman marched up to Capitol Hill to plead for minority contractors. He sought legislation to assure that they get at least 15 per cent of the railroad work in the Northeast corridor. But railroad lobbyists quietly spread the word that Coleman was acting on his own, that he didn't speak for the President. When this got back to Ford, he personally sent word to key members of Congress that he backed Coleman 100 per cent.

— Teammates of President Ford recall the time that his University of Michigan football team played a game in the South. The opposing team objected to a black player on the Michigan squad. Ford immediately let it be known that he would refuse to play if his black teammate was barred from the game.

SPECIOUS SUIT

Famed Texas physician and heart surgery pioneer Dr. Denton Cooley has been named, together with various other defendants, in a $31 million malpractice suit filed by a former patient. Yes, you read it correctly: 31 million dollars.

It seems that in 1969, according to the UPI report, Cooley implanted a heart valve in the plaintiff, who does not contend that the operation was not necessary or was bungled. But in 1975 — six years later — she began experiencing symptoms similar to those she had had before the operation.

About this time, she was notified by Cooley that he had received reports of a number of failures of her particular type of valve and he urged her to return to Texas so he could replace it with an improved model.

This she did and this he did, by virtue of which fact she has a new complaint which only $31 million will cure — the mental distress and loss of money she suffered as a result of having to undergo a second operation.

Our medical- legal expertise and 10 cents used to be worth a cup of coffee. Today it takes 25 cents. But it is obvious from this story, even to a layman, that both professions have made enormous strides.

Why, not too many years prior to 1969, people with serious heart ailments seldom lived long enough to sue anybody.

REVEALING REPRESSIONS

Reviewing a biography of Mao Tse-tung shortly before the Chinese leader joined his illustrious ancestors, the Soviet news agency Tass revealed that 28 million Chinese perished as a result of "repressions by the Maoist regime."

According to the book, written by one Fedor Burlatski, 25 million Chinese were liquidated during the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s, two million during the establishment of communes and one million in a campaign against national minorities.

Why, this is two or three times the number of Russians who perished during the establishment of communism in the Soviet Union.

POLITICS AND SOCIAL SECURITY

While better remembered now for other things, Rep. Wilbur Mills (D-Ark.) deserves a special place in history for his assurances concerning the Social Security amendments of 1972.

"This legislation is financed on a conservative basis," said the then-chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means. "I can assure the membership that we will take in each year more than we are paying out." Whereupon the House, ever eager to raise the ante on Social Security, pushed through another hike in benefits--including an automatic escalator clause to keep payouts pushing upward.

Nothing could have been further from the truth than Mills' assertion. As a result of the action taken in '72, Social Security payments are now outstripping revenues by $4-billion-plus a year. The so-called "trust fund" of the system is being rapidly depleted, and the long-term deficit obligations are so colossal ($2.4 trillion, according to the Treasury Department), that nobody knows how they can or will be funded.

The result is a dawning perception of Social Security crisis. Government actuaries are scurrying about, attempting to devise a short-term remedy. Lobby groups are battling to put the runaway costs on somebody else, rather than on their particular clients. Economists are pondering methods for meeting the long-term crunch that will surely arrive within a generation. From any standpoint, it's a mess.

The problem with the 1972 amendment, as with so much else that happens in our spend-thrift capital, was that Congress didn't know what it was doing--in the most literal sense. It was operating with revenue estimates based on assumptions concerning demographic growth, productive expansion and consequent increase in taxable payrolls, all of which were wrong. The result income shortfall has put the system deeply in the red.

So as you listen to the many "campaign promises" from presidential and congressional candidates, just remember that the Social Security crisis is upon us--created by the jerry-built nature of the system and the foolish amendments of '72.

But occasionally they allow their emotions to overcome their politeness. On one occasion, a Congressman from Indiana interrupted a speech by a Congressman from Ohio and called him a jackass. The Speaker of the House immediately ruled the remark unparliamentary and demanded an apology.

"I withdraw the unfortunate word, Mr. Speaker," said the offender, "but I insist that the gentleman is out of order."

"How am I out of order ?" angril shouted the other.

HOW REPRESENTATIVE WERE DEMO CONVENTION DELEGATES?

The Democrats are talking up the anti-Washington mood sweeping the country and Jimmy Carter won the nomination by speaking out against the "bureaucratic mess" in the Nation's Capital. But the majority of delegates who attended the convention in New York still turned out to believe in the role of Big Government.

Putting a set of questions to a cross-section of more than 400 delegates, the Washington Post discovered that 49 per cent favored bigger government with many services, versus 36 percent who wanted "smaller government with fewer services."

--62 per cent thought the government should make sure everyone has a job, while 31 per cent did not.

-- 81 per cent thought the Congress should begin a national health-care program, while 13 per cent said no.

-- 66 per cent said big industry should be broken up if their size impeded competition, while 25 per cent said no.

-- 74 per cent said they would like stricter gun control laws, while 21 per cent did not.

-- 59 per cent opposed state right-to-work laws, while 32 per cent favored them.

Without quite saying it, the Post suggested that those attending the convention did not quite represent the sentiments of the primary voters. Carter won his anti-Washington reputation berating the federal government and pledging to reduce 1,900 federal departments into "no more than 200, with a great savings in tax money."

"It was that proposal more than anything eise," noted the Post, "that won him (Carter) his anti-Washington reputation.

"The platform, however, plays this subject down, merely calling matter-of-factly for adoption of such things as sunset laws to slenderize the government where possible...

"Even this endorsement of sunset laws is carefully qualified. It is all right with the Democrats to put the government on a kind of weight-watching program, the platform says, but that does not mean the 'abandonment of governmental responsibility for addressing national problems.'

"And the platform goes on, with no protest from Carter, to embrace all the main items on the liberal spending agenda these days--increased 'national economic planning,' 'federal programs to reduce adult unemployment to as close to 3 per cent as possible in the next four years,' 'comprehensive national health insurance,' and 'fundamental welfare reform.'"

WHO TAKES THE HIGH ROAD?

WASHINGTON— It has been traditional in most presidential campaigns that the men running for President take the high road and their running mates for Vice President take the low road. For some reason it hasn't happened this year.

I discovered this when I took the high road the other day and found a lonely traffic cop sitting in his car.

"You're the first person I've seen up here since the presidential campaign started," he said.

"Where is everybody?" I asked.

"I have no idea," he said. "They sent me up here after the political conventions just to make sure everything was all right. They told me to expect Ford and Carter and busloads of press and campaign aides and advance men. My job was to keep the traffic on the high road moving along. But I haven't had a thing to do."

I looked along the high road and it was completely empty. It was an eerie feeling. "You mean to say neither Carter nor Ford has used the high road once?"

"Nope," he said. "As far as I can tell from my radio they've both taken the low road. I don't understand it. The low road is made of dirt. It has ruts in it and is full of muck and mire. Why they'd want to take it when we have a beautiful concrete highway up here is beyond me."

"That's funny," I told the cop, "because Ford insisted only last week he was taking the high road, but Carter was taking the low road. Then Carter said he tried to take the high road, but Ford wouldn't let him. I wonder if they even know where the high road is."

"Oh, they know where it is, all right," the cop said. "In their nomination speeches they both promised to take it. Millions of people came up here to see them. But in spite of their vows neither man has seen fit to take it just once."

"Maybe their aides won't let them take it. Perhaps the people running Carter's and Ford's campaigns have told them that if they take the high road no one will vote for them. After all, there are a lot more people who live on the low road, and that's where the votes are."

"Well, they're wrong," the cop said. "The American people expect their Presidents to take the high road. That's why we went to so much expense to build it. Nobody likes to see the man they're going to elect as their leader for the next four yrars throwing mud and rocks at the other fellow. The low road was built for vice-presidential candidates only. That's why we didn't pave it."

"You have a point," I admitted. "As a matter of fact, I came up here on the high road in hopes of getting a glimpse of Ford an Carter myself."

"Well, don't hold your breath," the cop said. "I hear they're both taking the low road for their third debate. It's going to be messier than a stock car race. Listen, I have a police car radio stationed on the low road coming in."

"This is Car 99. The President's limousine is coming through the muck, and Carter's limousine is now trying to pass him. Carter is throwing a fistful of mud at Ford, and the President has just picked up some mire to sling at Carter. Should we intervene?"

Headquarters' voice came over the radio. "No, Car 99, it's not our business to interfere with the candidates. Just keep the low road clear so the television people can cover it."

"Roger! Dole is now throwing mud at Carter and Mondale, and Mondale is throwing garbage at Ford and Dole and Nixon."

"We've got you, Car 99. Do you need assistance?"

"Connally is throwing mud at Carter now, and Butz is throwing manure at anyone he can hit. We could use some help."

Headquarters came over the radio. "Car 76, come in Car 76."

"That's me!" the cop I was with said excitedly. "This is Car 76."

"Go down to the low road and give Car 99 help."

"What about the high road?" the cop asked.

"It doesn't look as if we'll need anyone up there -- at least not until after Election Day."

Bullets Bursting in Air:

Secret Mafia sit-down called to protect low profile billion-dollar rackets

NEW YORK— It's healthy for the soul to look back in anger. So, when mob bodies professionally ventilated by bullets began dropping around town, I called a couple of "fellows" and learned that the neatly trimmed down Mafia "family" of the late Tommy (Three Fingers Brown) Luchese had just had an emergency sit-down in East Harlem.

This is unusual in this electronic bugging age. The dons and capos don't often gather in one place. However, the Luchese crowd, the late Jimmy Hoffa's favorite clan, has no visible godfather from whom to take direction.

Mafia "family" life has been quiet in town. The Luchese dons have been working silently with a new "boss," according to the highest authorities, of the old Joe Banana's mob which the federals say was organized by the now retired Joe Bonanno who has exchanged the Arizona sun belt for his old gun belt.

The hood the Justice Department believes now to be Godfather of the Bananas band is 67-year-old ex-convict Carmine (Liol) Galente. He's been moving stealthily. Why throw one's weight or bullets around? Both families are from the Palermo and Castellamare del Golfo area of Sicily. And that's where the Mafia started.

So Galente and one Anthony (Tony Ducks, The Duke) Corallo, reputed acting leader of the Luchese operations, have been right friendly. And Pappadio was one of Tony Duck's good friends. (Another intimate was Jimmy Hoffa.) So, why stir the federals with shootings? Why bring in all the investigative newspeople?

And, after all, who on the inside would dare challenge such a Mafia combine?

The stakes literally are "in the billions" according to one of the nation's most famed prosecutors. The Luchese mob as been at it for decades. Specializing in garment firms, trucking, gambling and narcotics. And in subverting public officials -- like planting one of their men in the U.S. Attorney's office in the Southern District here in the early '50s. And corrupting a New York state Supreme Court justice. And bribing one of ex-Mayor John Lindsay's close advisers.

Low profile operations are far more preferable than high decibel Mafia gunplay these days. The FBI, despite all the slings and arrows aimed at it, has been in highly successful deep throat operations here in cooperation with the Justice Department anti-racketeer strike forces. Some time ago they nailed Godfather Philip (Rusty) Rastelli, who was succeeded by Galente as head of the Bananas mob according to the authorities, for violation of the Hobbs anti-extortion act. He got 10 years and a $50,000 fine. Today he's in prison.

And then there is the virtually unknown James (Jimmy Nap) Napoli, the one-man Mafia family. He regularly has handled millions in his own three state gambling network -- New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The other day Jimmy Nap got himself a five-year prison term and a $20,000 fine on illegal gambling charges. Evidence by courtesy of the FBI. Earlier Napoli had been charged with using an air freight forwarding firm to shake down the Singer Sewing Machine Co. But the case was stopped after the government presented is evidence. There were other things to do, it was said.

Jimmy Nap is considered the nation's biggest gambler. Other dons have come to him for advice. He's reputedly as powerful and important in the national network as any godfather in organized crime. He was never made an official member of any Mafia unit. He's an independent. And he was doing right well.

So with the FBI prowling all over the place, the big crime families -- most of them specialists in industrial and labor racketeering -- have gone low key. Actually, if we talk in godfather images, the metropolitan New York-New Jersey area's five families are leaderless.

They're still big money-makers. Mistake that not. But times and the garment rag jungle and trucking have changed. One reason is the FBI's and the New York strike forces' deep infiltration of the mobs.

The Mafia godfathers had gotten too cocky. They had gunned each other. It's nice to read funny books about how the mob can't shoot straight. They can. They did.

Now Joe Colombo, still head of his tribe, is a vegetable with a bullet in the brain. Godfather of Godfathers, Carlo Gambino is ill and very quiet. The old Genovese mob has more dead chiefs, dead from lead poisoning, than live ones.

There no longer is an Eastern Mr. Big. The authorities believe that Galente has ambitions. But he's always in low profile. So there appeared to be no mob motive for the execution of the happy-go-lucky, big-money-in-the-pocket Pappadio.

That's why the Luchese family had an emergency reunion in East Harlem. Could it be an outsider they wondered searching for power over the famed old crowds which still have control of billions of dollars of narcotics sales, real estate transactions, white-collar crime and labor and industrial racketeering -- and truck hijacking?

Nixon Tapes Make a Comeback

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Those pernicious, all-hearing Nixon tapes are back again to haunt the GOP. The tapes seem to support John Dean's charge that in 1972 then-President Richard Nixon used Gerald Ford to help block an early Watergate investigation.

Even more troublesome, we have now established that Nixon purposely altered the tape transcripts to cover up Ford's possible role in stopping the late Rep. Wright Patman, D.-Tex., from investigating Watergate.

Ford has conceded that, as House Republican leader, he opposed the probe. But twice he has sworn that he acted on his own without any pressure from the White House. Dean now claims that he learned from two White House aides, William Timmons and Richard Cook, that they had consulted with Ford about derailing Patman.

Our own investigation doesn't disprove Ford's sworn testimony. But we have positively established that Nixon altered the transcripts in at least eight instances to conceal Ford's possible involvement. These statements were picked up by the hidden microphones in the Oval Office. But Nixon later deleted them from the transcripts.

At another point, Nixon suggested that Rep. William Widnall, R.-N.J., the top Republican on Patman's committee, was too weak to stall the investigation. "Put it down," instructed Nixon, "uh, Jerry should talk to Widnall and, uh, just brace him." This instruction was also deleted from the transcripts.

One of the most significant omissions involved Timmons, whom Dean identified as a go-between with Ford. Nixon said: "The game has to be played awful rough ... You'll follow through with ... Who will over there? Who ... Timmons, or with Ford." This reference to Ford and Timmons was also struck out of the transcripts.

On another part of the tape, Nixon questioned whether Ford could "do anything with Patman." Again, Nixon stated that Ford has "got to know" that Nixon personally wanted the probe killed. Dean acknowledged, according to the tapes, that Ford would be advised Nixon was personally behind the request. These embarrassing remarks, too, were deleted.

There is clear evidence, in short, that Nixon censored the references to Ford from the transcript. This doesn't necessarily mean that Nixon's instructions to his staff were carried out. It is always possibble, as Ford insists, that they never spoke to him about the probe. It should also be noted that Ford had nothing to do with editing the transcripts. It wasn't Ford but Nixon who was responsible for the deletions.

Footnote: Timmons and Cook both deny that they talked with Ford about killing the Patman investigation. We have been unable to get any comment from Nixon.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE: The special prosecutor has now cleared President Ford of illegally pocketing or diverting any funds from the maritime unions. As additional evidence that the maritime unions have no hold on him, we have learned that they brought tremendous pressure on him to sign a 1974 bill requiring that a percentage of oil imports had to be carried on U.S. ships. The unions' friends on Capitol Hill even threatened to hold up Ford legislation if he didn't sign the bill. Nevertheless, the President vetoed the bill.

— Not long ago, Transportation Secretary William Coleman marched up to Capitol Hill to plead for minority contractors. He sought legislation to assure that they get at least 15 per cent of the railroad work in the Northeast corridor. But railroad lobbyists quietly spread the word that Coleman was acting on his own, that he didn't speak for the President. When this got back to Ford, he personally sent word to key members of Congress that he backed Coleman 100 per cent.

— Teammates of President Ford recall the time that his University of Michigan football team played a game in the South. The opposing team objected to a black player on the Michigan squad. Ford immediately let it be known that he would refuse to play if his black teammate was barred from the game.

Secretarial science lab to be held at TRCC Oct. 28

POPLAR BLUFF— An innovative program for teaching secretarial science will be the topic of an open house Oct. 28 at Three Rivers Community College.

The TRCC secretarial science laboratory, located at the corner of Main and Pine streets, will be open to the public from 7 to 9:30 p.m. A new method of individualized instruction in typing and shorthand will be demonstrated by students and staff.

Using the new method, each student is pretested to determine what couse level he or she is qualified for. The student will then progress at his or her own rate of speed.

Students use headphones, tape recorders and film projectors purchased with funds granted TRCC by the State Department of Education. Individualized instruction will eliminate competition in the classroom and will allow students with different levels of competence to receive instruction at the same time.

"We're hoping to be able to serve the needs of area adults even better than we have in the past with this program," said Paul Hillis, dean of occupational education at TRCC. "These classes are conducted during the day and evening to give all students the opportunity to learn in their spare time."

This method of instruction is especially helpful to adults who have been out of the work force for a while or who have had some instruction in secretarial science many years ago.

A student can take a reivew course in typing or shorthand to "brush up" on skills, then move to another level without completing an entire semester of an elementary course first. In addition to regularly scheduled classes, students are expected to attend labs in their free time.

Dr. Jack L. Bottenfield, TRCC president, said, "Dean Hillis and the secretarial instructors are to be complimented on their hard work and insight in developing this highly innovative curricular program at TRCC. This should be of special interest to employers in the area who would have an opportunity to hire graduates from the program."

Natural gas supply situation is showing slight improvement

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark.-- The natural gas supply situation has improved slightly for the 13 large industrial customers of Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. and Associated Natural Gas Co.

The industrial users -- designated "priority two" customers by the utilities -- have been notified that they now may use up to 30 per cent of their "basic annual entitlement" (BAE) of natural gas, according to Ralph Wafler, gas opeations manager for Ark-Mo and Associated.

"On Aug. 17, we notified these customers that, based on our projections ..ey should plan to use 20 per cent of their BAE, and that we would update that figure as soon as we could. Due to abnormally mild weather, the late harvest and curtailments that haven't been quite as severe as predicted by the pipelines, we're now able to release another 10 per cent of their BAE."

Wafler said the BAEs were established for the industries about 1972, when the Federal Power Commission allowed the nation's natural gas pipelines to begin curtailing the utilities.

"We've adopted this approach to make sure our human needs customers have the natural gas they need, and at the same time to make all the gas possible available to our industrial customers," Wafler said.

Polo tournament is named for a former Sikestonian

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — The late Col. Hal Swanagon, a former Sikeston, Mo., resident, has had a polo tournament named after him.

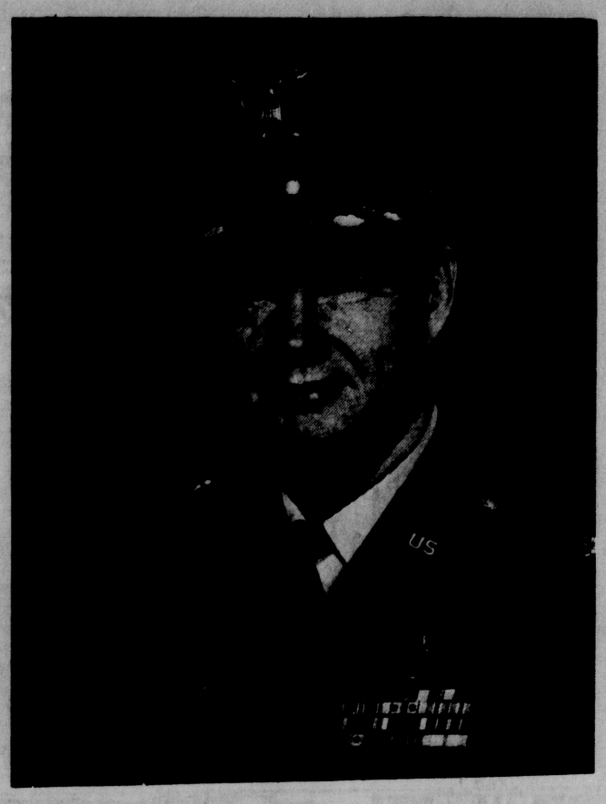

Swanagon, who graduated from Sikeston High School in 1930 and left Sikeston in 1941, was the base commander at F. E. Warren Air Force Base near here, when a group of townspeople approached him to provide a place for a polofield. Since polo fields are rather large, 300 yards by 200 yards, the group felt the base was the only possible site.

Polo had been a tradition in the area from the 1890's until the last mounted military left for service in World War II, and the revival of the sport in early 1972 was looked upon as an important event in the area.

Swanagon, who was married to the former Marie Lewis, daughter of Mrs. and the late I. G. Lewis of Sikeston, provided the group the required space and supported the new polo club's activities.

Now, polo is once again a tradition here, and a Swanagon Cup game is played during a tournament held in conjunction with the annual Cheyenne Frontier Days.

Col. Swanagon, who died in 1974, was the nephew of Ms. Glen Keller of Sikeston and Mrs. Hildreth Dill of Murray, Ky.

7,575 handicapped will be rehabilitated for work

JEFFERSON CITY — An estimated 7,575 handicapped Missourians will be rehabilitated for employment during the current fiscal year under programs administered by the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

This projection was contained in the new state plan for vocational rehabilitation approved by the State Board of Education at its October meeting.

During the past fiscal year, 7,001 Missourians, mostly out-of-school adults, were rehabilitated under the State Department of Education program. Approximately 80 per cent of the services provided these persons were educational in nature.

To be eligible for rehabilitation services, an individual must have a disability that is a handicap to employment and there must be a reasonable expectation that he-she will be employable if appropriate services are provided.

The state plan adopted by the Board of Education calls for continued stress on rehabilitation of the severely handicapped. It is estimated that 40 per cent of the approximately 7,575 persons to be rehabilitated this year are now severely disabled.

During the current year, an estimated 43,900 Missourians will receive some kind of services under the vocational rehabilitation program, including some 4,400 persons who are recipients of Social Security disability benefits and 2,500 who receive supplemental security income benefits.

Other action by the State Board of Education included:

— Appointed Kathryn Cormack, a teacher in the Lindbergh School District in St. Louis County, to serve on the teacher education and certification advisory committee to the State Department of Education.

—Appointed three persons to the Missouri Instructional Television Council. They are: Dr. Charles Koelling, University of Missouri- Columbia; William Schatz, superintendent, Republic School District; and Dr. John De Arman, director of curriculum, North Kansas City School District.

— Appointed two persons to the State Advisory Council for the federal Title IV programs. They are: Dr. James Wooten, director of program planning and development, St. Louis Schools. and Dr. Lonnie Morrow, Northeast Missouri State University at Kirksville.

Kay Neill

PORTAGEVILLE — Kay Neill of Clay Center, Kan., has been appointed University of Missouri child and family development specialist for the Bootheel Extension Area, announces Glenn Patton of Portageville, area director.

Miss Neill replaces Mary Jo Herde, who resigned to accept a job in New Hampshire.

Miss Neill received a master's degree in family and child development earlier this year from Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan. She received a bachelor's degree cum laude there in the same field in 1974. While a student at KSU, she worked as a graduate assistant at the Family Resource Center, and before that as a graduate research assistant at St. Mary's Indian Center.

She is a member of Omicron Nu, a home economics honorary, and the National Council on Family Relations.

The new extension specialist will be working with other specialists in child and family development, clothing and textiles, and home economists on area programs including Homemaker Clubs.

Miss Neill will begin work with UM Extension based in Benton about the middle of November following an orientation period.

UM Extension offers educational programs in various phases of agriculture, business, community development, continuing education, and youth development as well as home economics through extension centers in each county.

You hear a lot of talk in an election year about "bureaucracy." One of the best examples I've seen appeared awhile back in the Congressional Record. Since there was no author's name, you can fantasize on who wrote it.

IN THE BEGINNING GOD CREATED HEAVEN AND EARTH. He was then faced with a class action suit for having failed to file an environmental impact statement with the Heavenly Environmental Protection Agency (HEPA, an angelically- staffed agency dedicated to keeping the Universe pollution-free.) God was granted a temporary permit for the Heavenly portion of the project but was issued a cease and desist order for the Earthly part, pending further study by HEPA.

Then God said, "LET THERE BE LIGHT," and He should never have brought up this point since one of the Council was active in Sierrangel Club and immediately demanded to know how the light would be made. Would there be stripmining? How about thermal pollution? Air pollution? God explained the light would come from a huge ball of fire.

Nobody in Council really understood this but it was provisionally accepted assuming (1) no smog or smoke would result from the ball of fire; (2) a separate burning permit would be required, and (3) since continuous light would be a waste of energy it should be dark at least half the time. God agreed. When asked how the Earth would be covered for darkness, God said, "LET THERE BE FIRMAMENT AMIDST THE WATERS" and one ecologically radical council member accused him of doubletalk, but action was tabled since God would be required first to file for permit from Angelic Bureau of Land Management (ABLM) and further would be required to obtain water permits from appropriate agencies.

God said, "LET THE WATERS BRING FORTH THE CREEPING CREATURES HAVING LIFE AND THE FOWL THAT MAY FLY OVER THE EARTH." Here again, Council took no formal action, since it would require approval of the Game and Fish Commission, coordinated with Heavenly Wildlife Federation and Audubongelic Society.

Everything appeared in order until God said He wanted to complete the project in six days. At that point he was advised by Council that his timing was completely out of the question. HEPA would require a minimum of 180 days to review the application and impact statement. After that, there would be public hearings. It would be 10 or 12 months before a permit could be granted.

God said, "To Hell with it."

Long grain rice simple to prepare

If you're one of those people who say "Rice is rice-it all tastes and looks the same," there is something you should know.

Although the various types of rice are similar, there is one type, American long grain rice, that is different and of premium quality. Look at a package of long grain rice and you'll see slender, long grains, snowy white in color. After cooking, long grain rice is tender, separate, and light. Its flavor is delicate and complementary to almost all foods.

Some other people say rice is difficult to cook. The truth is, long grain rice is very simple to prepare. Follow these directions for perfect rice every time: bring to boil 2 cups water and 1 teaspoon salt. Stir in 1 cup American long grain rice, lower heat; cover, simmer 20 minutes.

If there is a "trick" to cooking rice, it's that the heat should be turned low enough to prevent "boilovers," but high enough that a small amount of steam escapes around the edge of the saucepan. This steam tells you that the rice is cooking and that it will be done.

Rice cookery is necessary to many cuisines, but it is especially important to Creole or Southern recipes. One favorite Southern rice recipe, Country Captain, consists of economical chicken simmered in a mild curry-tomato sauce and served over fluffy, tender long grain rice.

COUNTRY CAPTAIN

- 1 frying chicken, cut in serving pieces
- Salt and pepper
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cans (1 lb. ea.) stewed tomatoes
- 2 packets MBT instant chicken flavored broth
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
- Dash hot pepper sauce
- 1/4 cup raisins
- 1/4 cup toasted, slivered almonds
- 3 cups hot, cooked Carolina or Mahatma long grain rice

Season chicken pieces with salt and pepper. In heavy skillet over low heat, saute chicken in hot oil. Remove chicken from skillet. Add onion, green pepper, and garlic. Saute until tender. Blend flour into pan drippings. Stir in tomatoes, chicken broth, thyme, curry, hot pepper sauce, raisins, and almonds. Return chicken to skillet. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Serve over hot, fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Mrs. Bond's portrait unveiled Wednesday

JEFFERSON CITY — The official portrait of Missouri's first lady Carolyn Reid Bond was unveiled Wednesday at 11 a.m. ceremonies at the Missouri Executive Mansion.

Portrait artist Gilbert Early of St. Louis and official Mansion Portrait Fund co-chairman Mrs. Leland Curtis and Mrs Stuart Exon of Jefferson City unveiled the portrait. Following the unveiling guests were served brunch with Mrs. Bond.

Musical accompaniment for the occasion was provided by The Esterhazy String Quartet from the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Presented to Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., for permanent display in the 105-year-old mansion, the portrait of Mrs. Bond was made possible by contributions from 190 women and 35 Federated Republican Women's Clubs from throughout the state. Among the contributors were two former first ladies of Missouri.

"Our task was made easier by a generous initial donation from the Seventh District Federated Republican Women's Clubs, Mrs. A.L. Shortridge of Joplin, president," Mrs. Curtis said.

She went on to say that the Missouri Federation of Republican Women's Clubs designated the First Lady Portrait Fund as the official MFRW Bicentennial project with Mrs. Joe Capps of Liberty as chairman.

"We surpassed our goal of $2,500 for Mrs. Bond's portrait last week," Mrs. Curtis said. The additional money collected will be given to Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., for use to maintain and restore other paintings in the Mansion.

Ann Landers

Song a star-spangled problem

Dear Ann Landers: Since this is the bicentennial year it would be most appropriate if you would print this letter.

I have attended four public functions in the past two weeks and am appalled at the number of people, who, when the national anthem is played, start out with "Oh say can you see by the dawn's early light," then stumble around and fake it until they come to "rockets' red glare -- the bombs bursting in air," with another fade-out till "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Isn't this song taught in our schools anymore? The young people are as bad as the older ones. What's the matter with us Americans anyway? -- Patriotism Gone?

Dear Patriot: Let's face it. "The Star-Spangled Banner" is not easy to sing. The lyrics don't fit the music. Example: "Whose broad stripes and bright stars" is quite a hassle.

Also, how many people know the meaning of such terms as "gallantly streaming" and "ramparts we watched"? And that picturesque phrase "at the twilight's last gleaming" is a bit of a non sequitur after "what so proudly we hailed."

Francis Scott Key put the words of his poem to the tune of an old English drinking song. Maybe THAT'S the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter in the paper. It is important that certain people see the answer.

What do you think of parents who plan to take their five-year-old daughter to the hospital when the mother goes to give birth to a new baby? They insist it is very healthy for small children to see everything. -- Friends Of Th Kooks

Dear Friends: I think Mr. and Mrs. Kook will be in for a surprise. I know of no hospital that would allow it.

Dear Ann Landers: I feel like a hick asking this question but I've never been in a plane in my life and I need some answers.

I'll be going to Europe in November. Friends who have been there tell me I'll be exhausted from jet lag. Any suggestions on how to avoid it? Thanks, Ann. -- First-Timer

Dear First: The best way to beat jet lag on a trip to Europe is to take a morning flight. This will get you where you're going by bedtime. The next morning you will be on the clock and rarin' to go. If you take a night flight and can't sleep you'll be DOA (Dead On Arrival).

Other helpful hints: Get everything done two days before you leave. Even packing. Last-minute rushing can make a basket case out of the most experienced traveler. I say TWO days because one is never enough.

Wear loose-fitting clothes for the trip. (Tight girdles are murder.) Once aloft, undo your belt and collar and remove your shoes. This will help you body maintain good circulation.

Don't overeat (or overdrink) while in flight. (Easier said than done.)

Have a wonderful time and send me a postcard letting me know if you took my advice.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your requestand a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

SCHOOL IS HOME

Mrs. Mondale marches on

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

"Campaign years are always good years," says Joan Mondale. "We're not physically together, but we're working for the same goals."

A political wife.

"I'm not alone," says Joan Mondale. "I'm with people all the time."

A political wife.

"I really enjoy campaigning," says Joan Mondale. "It's really a ball."

If she ever has second thoughts, she doesn't say so. If her enthusiasm ever flags, she doesn't let on. If her feet ever hurt, she marches on.

And the stuff of her campaign is, above all, pleasant, sensible and soft. No hard discussion of issues, no list of facts and statistics. It's the intuitive, wifely approach to politics.

Joan Mondale talks about the goals of the Democratic party, the importance of voting and the character and compassion of the two candidates.

Characteristic of her approach are the words, said over and over: "We need men with wise heads and warm hearts... I ask not only for your votes, but for your hands and your hearts and with your help we can make this a happy land again."

She says the same words repeatedly, but her style is not wooden. She can laugh aloud, clap her hands, reminisce about rolling red Cross bandages or joke that one son's social life doesn't leave much time for campaigning.

Clearly Joan Mondale doesn't want to be the heavyweight wife.

"I don't feel my husband married me to write his speeches or influence him in a direct way," she says.

"I feel now that I am his partner and his advocate. We see eye to eye on most issues.

"Am I a big pusher? No." She wrinkles her nose. "As far as a role as adviser is concerned, I don't really have one.

"But I am concerned about voter apathy. And I try to back Fritz up and bring him interesting information and requests I hear around the country."

Doesn't she miss her husband on the campaign?

"Fritz (Walter's nickname) has always been gone," she says matter-of-factly in a back seat interview sandwiched between a senior citizen's community and the hotel where she will take a nap.

"We only had 13 dates before we were engaged," she says, explaining how she accepts the campaign time spent apart. "We haven't spent a lot of hours alone together."

Despite the separations, Joan Mondale can say: "I'm so glad he didn't stand me up as a puppet by his side in the campaign, because that would become a trifle boring."

While two children are in school and one son handles baggage on his father's plane, Joan Mondale campaigns alone on a trail that others might find unkind.

Elmira, to Ithaca, to Westchester, to Yonkers, to Haverstraw, to White Plains:

Speak at a breakfast, give interviews, open a headquarters, give interviews, take a walking tour, eat lunch, give a speech, drive to the airport, catch a nap in the sky, deplane, give an interview, drive to a factory, meet workers, drive to a senior citizens community, take a tour, give a speech, shake hands, give interviews, drive to a hotel for an hour's nap, give an interview on the way, drive to an arts center, give a speech, shake hands.

Turn in for the night.

A not untypical day.

In Rome, N.Y., she had just told reporters she agreed with the presidential debates that exclude minor party candidates.

Walking to her car, she raised a hand anxiously to her face and asked no one in particular:

"Was that too mean? I don't want to be mean."

After an appearance and chatty news conference at a senior citizens community in Haverstraw, she asked: "Was I all right? I just tried to be natural."

Then, reassured, she said smiling: "I try to follow Muriel Humphrey's advice: "Be yourself, relax, enjoy it.' And I do."

She once gave tours of the National Gallery in Washington, D.C., and of historic sites. She is especially interested in the arts and historical preservation.

"When I first sat down with campaign schedulers," she said, "I told them: 'Please, not just luncheons. Let me see museums and art galleries and renovated downtowns.'"

If she becomes America's second lady, Joan Mondale plans to be an activist, focusing on the arts and encouraging federal support.

A woman dressed as a colonial matron was weaving "a band for my husband from the hair of his noble steed — to remember me by."

Joan Mondale joked: "Let's hope he remembers you first and his horse second."

Later, at a reception, she told of meeting Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter in Plains, Ga. She was pleased she could wear her new dress, chat with Rosalynn and admire pictures of Amy, Carter's 8-year-old daughter.

She was impressed that Carter insisted the wives join the men.

"I really liked Mrs. Mondale," said Carol Eilenberg, 17. "She was sincere and down to earth and one of us. I liked the part about the dress and having the wives listen in."

Bill Ganon, Rome Democratic chairman, nodded in approval as the Mondale motorcade departed. "She was just fine, very cultured," he said. "In a small city like this, they were very impressed by the candidate's wife."

That night Mrs. Mondale addressed students at Elmira College, saying: "It's going to be a very close election," and urging the audience to vote.

She stumbled a bit and said she couldn't answer a complicated query on economics.

Later, she cut a ribbon to open a campaign headquarters where, to an advance man's chagrin, only a small group showed up, including a local candidate named Loll who was passing out lollipops.

A nun came up to her and said: "Good for you. You didn't know the answer and you didn't pretend you did."

In Yonkers she stood at the gates of an elevator factory as hundreds of workers streamed past, not stopping unless a union official shouted: "Hey, Mick! Hey, Bill, come say 'hello' to Mrs. Mondale."

"Oh," she said sweetly. "You ride a motorcyle."

Ann Landers

Song a star-spangled problem

Dear Ann Landers: Since this is the bicentennial year it would be most appropriate if you would print this letter.

I have attended four public functions in the past two weeks and am appalled at the number of people, who, when the national anthem is played, start out with "Oh say can you see by the dawn's early light," then stumble around and fake it until they come to "rockets' red glare -- the bombs bursting in air," with another fade-out till "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Isn't this song taught in our schools anymore? The young people are as bad as the older ones. What's the matter with us Americans anyway? -- Patriotism Gone?

Dear Patriot: Let's face it. "The Star-Spangled Banner" is not easy to sing. The lyrics don't fit the music. Example: "Whose broad stripes and bright stars" is quite a hassle.

Also, how many people know the meaning of such terms as "gallantly streaming" and "ramparts we watched"? And that picturesque phrase "at the twilight's last gleaming" is a bit of a non sequitur after "what so proudly we hailed."

Francis Scott Key put the words of his poem to the tune of an old English drinking song. Maybe THAT'S the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter in the paper. It is important that certain people see the answer.

What do you think of parents who plan to take their five-year-old daughter to the hospital when the mother goes to give birth to a new baby? They insist it is very healthy for small children to see everything. -- Friends Of Th Kooks

Dear Friends: I think Mr. and Mrs. Kook will be in for a surprise. I know of no hospital that would allow it.

Dear Ann Landers: I feel like a hick asking this question but I've never been in a plane in my life and I need some answers.

I'll be going to Europe in November. Friends who have been there tell me I'll be exhausted from jet lag. Any suggestions on how to avoid it? Thanks, Ann. -- First-Timer

Dear First: The best way to beat jet lag on a trip to Europe is to take a morning flight. This will get you where you're going by bedtime. The next morning you will be on the clock and rarin' to go. If you take a night flight and can't sleep you'll be DOA (Dead On Arrival).

Other helpful hints: Get everything done two days before you leave. Even packing. Last-minute rushing can make a basket case out of the most experienced traveler. I say TWO days because one is never enough.

Wear loose-fitting clothes for the trip. (Tight girdles are murder.) Once aloft, undo your belt and collar and remove your shoes. This will help you body maintain good circulation.

Don't overeat (or overdrink) while in flight. (Easier said than done.)

Have a wonderful time and send me a postcard letting me know if you took my advice.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your requestand a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

SCHOOL IS HOME

Edwards bought a 50-year-old building a couple of years ago and converted it into a home.

Mrs. Mondale marches on

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

"Campaign years are always good years," says Joan Mondale. "We're not physically together, but we're working for the same goals."

A political wife.

"I'm not alone," says Joan Mondale. "I'm with people all the time."

A political wife.

"I really enjoy campaigning," says Joan Mondale. "It's really a ball."

If she ever has second thoughts, she doesn't say so. If her enthusiasm ever flags, she doesn't let on. If her feet ever hurt, she marches on.

And the stuff of her campaign is, above all, pleasant, sensible and soft. No hard discussion of issues, no list of facts and statistics. It's the intuitive, wifely approach to politics.

Joan Mondale talks about the goals of the Democratic party, the importance of voting and the character and compassion of the two candidates.

Characteristic of her approach are the words, said over and over: "We need men with wise heads and warm hearts... I ask not only for your votes, but for your hands and your hearts and with your help we can make this a happy land again."

She says the same words repeatedly, but her style is not wooden. She can laugh aloud, clap her hands, reminisce about rolling red Cross bandages or joke that one son's social life doesn't leave much time for campaigning.

Clearly Joan Mondale doesn't want to be the heavyweight wife.

"I don't feel my husband married me to write his speeches or influence him in a direct way," she says.

"I feel now that I am his partner and his advocate. We see eye to eye on most issues.

"Am I a big pusher? No." She wrinkles her nose. "As far as a role as adviser is concerned, I don't really have one.

"But I am concerned about voter apathy. And I try to back Fritz up and bring him interesting information and requests I hear around the country."

Doesn't she miss her husband on the campaign?

"Fritz (Walter's nickname) has always been gone," she says matter-of-factly in a back seat interview sandwiched between a senior citizen's community and the hotel where she will take a nap.

"We only had 13 dates before we were engaged," she says, explaining how she accepts the campaign time spent apart. "We haven't spent a lot of hours alone together."

Despite the separations, Joan Mondale can say: "I'm so glad he didn't stand me up as a puppet by his side in the campaign, because that would become a trifle boring."

While two children are in school and one son handles baggage on his father's plane, Joan Mondale campaigns alone on a trail that others might find unkind.

Elmira, to Ithaca, to Westchester, to Yonkers, to Haverstraw, to White Plains:

Speak at a breakfast, give interviews, open a headquarters, give interviews, take a walking tour, eat lunch, give a speech, drive to the airport, catch a nap in the sky, deplane, give an interview, drive to a factory, meet workers, drive to a senior citizens community, take a tour, give a speech, shake hands, give interviews, drive to a hotel for an hour's nap, give an interview on the way, drive to an arts center, give a speech, shake hands.

Turn in for the night.

A not untypical day.

In Rome, N.Y., she had just told reporters she agreed with the presidential debates that exclude minor party candidates.

Walking to her car, she raised a hand anxiously to her face and asked no one in particular:

State stresses vocational rehabilitation in workmen's compensation benefits

JEFFERSON CITY — Although the Missouri State Committee on Workmen's Compensation recommended last December that laws providing physical rehabilitation be expanded to include vocational rehabilitation, such benefits already are available to many injured workers.

Missouri's workmen's compensation laws do not provide specifically for these services, but since January the Division of Workmen's Compensation has had a vocational rehabilitation specialist working to see that injured workers are made aware of the services that do exist.

Mrs. Sarah Doelling says her job is mainly to act as a liaison between the Division of Workmen's Compensation and the State Vocational Rehabilitation Office, which provides training for handicapped and disabled persons.

Mrs. Doelling's activity reflects the increasing concern throughout the country and state for helping injured workers lead productive working lives, even though they have been injured and are unable to perform their regular work.

Mrs. Doelling says that providing an injured worker with support and medical care falls short of what the real goal should be: determining what work they are qualified to do and giving them the necessary training to do it.

She refers persons who are receiving workmen's compensation benefits to the Vocational Rehabilitation Office, where they are received by Robert Heineman, director of field services.

Heineman says when the referrals are received they are forwarded to one of 20 district offices throughout the state. When the office for the district in which the injured worker lives receives the referral, a counselor contacts the person to inform them of available services and to screen them to determine what remaining they want and need.

But John Dixon, a member of the workmen's compensation study committee who represented insurance interests, says cases from the Division of Workmen's Compensation should take precedence over other cases for vocational rehabilitation. That does not happen now.

"They (persons referred by the Division of Workmen's Compensation) should receive the services as fast or faster than anybody else because they are the ones who have been paying taxes," he says.

If the Vocational Rehabilitation office cannot provide services adequately to persons who are on workmen's compensation, Dixon says the workmen's compensation division should be given the funds to provide the benefits.

Heineman says in the last year there have been 34 cases referred to the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation from the Division of Workmen's Compensation.

"There has been a new emphasis in the past year," says Heineman, "a new cooperative agreement in which the two agencies work together."

He says the 34 cases received since January are in different stages of development. Some persons have been trained and are back at work, some still are receiving their retraining, and others are in the preliminary stages of screening to determine their interests and abilities.

The State Vocational Rehabilitation Office receives federal funds from the Rehabilitation Service Administration, a division of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. For every dollar Missouri spends on vocational rehabilitation, the federal government matches it with four dollars.

Applicants for vocational rehabilitation benefits must meet certain medical and financial eligibility requirements. These are determined by the counselors from the division offices in their screening of applicants.

Heineman says the Vocational Rehabilitation Office provides mostly administrative and counseling services, and purchases other services such as hospital evaluation and training and, in some cases, items such as artifical limbs necessary in vocational retraining.

Dixon is also a member of an ad hoc committee appointed by Gov. Christopher Bond to recommend needed changes in Missouri's workmen's compensation laws. The committee expects to make its report to Bond by Dec. 1.

Accidents bring toll to 87 killed in 13-counties

Highway Patrol Troop E. Headquarters reported 11 fatalities in nine accidents for September, bringing the year's fatalities to 87 in the 13-county troop area.

Three fatalities occurred in Dunklin County, two each in Butler County and Ripley County, and one each in Iron, Madison, Mississippi and Wayne counties.

Carolyn J. Smith, Peggy L. Finney and Monia J. Rawls were fatally injured in an accident in Dunklin County on Sept. 11.

Other fatalities are: Raymond K. Labrot and Johnie M. Allen, Butler County; James L. Laramore, Iron; Doyace H. Chastain, Madison; Jerry H. Stark, Mississippi; Fred Lawrence Herzog, John C. O'Neal, Ripley; Jacob Henson, Wayne.

The patrol reported 79 accidents involving injuries to 157 persons, bringing the year's total of injuries to 1,290.

Troop E arrests for the month for hazardous traffic offenses totaled 2,128, bringing the year's total to 15,477. Of those arrests, 495 were in New Madrid County, 328 in Pemiscot County and 302 in Cape County.

Of 3,200 hazardous traffic warnings issued in September, 444 were in Butler County, 353 in Cape County, 347 in Madison County, 340 in New Madrid County and 336 in Pemiscot County.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Honor your marriage and its vows, and be pure; for God will surely punish all those who are immoral or commit adultery. Stay away from the love of money; be satisfied with what you have. For God has said, "I will never, never fail you nor forsake you." That is why we can say without any doubt or fear, "The Lord is my Helper and I am not afraid of anything that mere man can do to me." Remember your leaders who have taught you the Word of God. Think of all the good that has come from their lives, and try to trust the Lord as they do.

THE 94TH CONGRESS -- PART II

In my last column, I discussed some of the achievements of the recently-adjourned 94th Congress. In this column, I would like to talk about some of the things this past Congress did not achieve.

The 94th Congress was the busiest ever, spending more time in session and recording more votes than any previous Congress. But it was not one of the most productive Congresses, in terms of major legislation enacted. One of the main reasons for this was the continuing stalemate between Congress and President Ford.

In some ways, this continuing conflict produced positive results. For example, the Congress refused to accept the President's energy proposals, which relied on higher consumer prices and fatter energy company profits to solve all problems. Congress refused to decontrol the price of oil and natural gas, rejected the Ford proposal to abandon allocation programs, and forced the President to rescind the costly and ineffective oil tariff. Congress also rejected the Rockefeller plan for a $100 billion subsidy of private energy development.

But, there also was a negative side to the energy picture. While the Congress did achieve some specific energy goals (such as authorizing a number of energy conservation, research and development programs), it did not come up with a comprehensive energy policy. In my view, development of such a policy must be one of the first priorities of the 95th Congress.

In the area of food stamp and welfare reform, we again faced a lack of constructive policy proposals from the Administration. The Senate came up with its own legislation to reduce food stamp fraud, but the House failed to act on the measure. Several Senators offered general welfare reform packages but none were enacted.

Until we clean up Medicare and Medicaid, it seems unlikely that we will be able to deal with the overall problem of rising health care costs. Proposals such as the Kennedy plan for first-dollar health care coverage generated many speeches in the 94th Congress, but many Senators (myself included) agree that such a proposal is beyond our means. Specific proposals for less ambitious programs (such as coverage of catastrophic illnesses only) were not forthcoming.

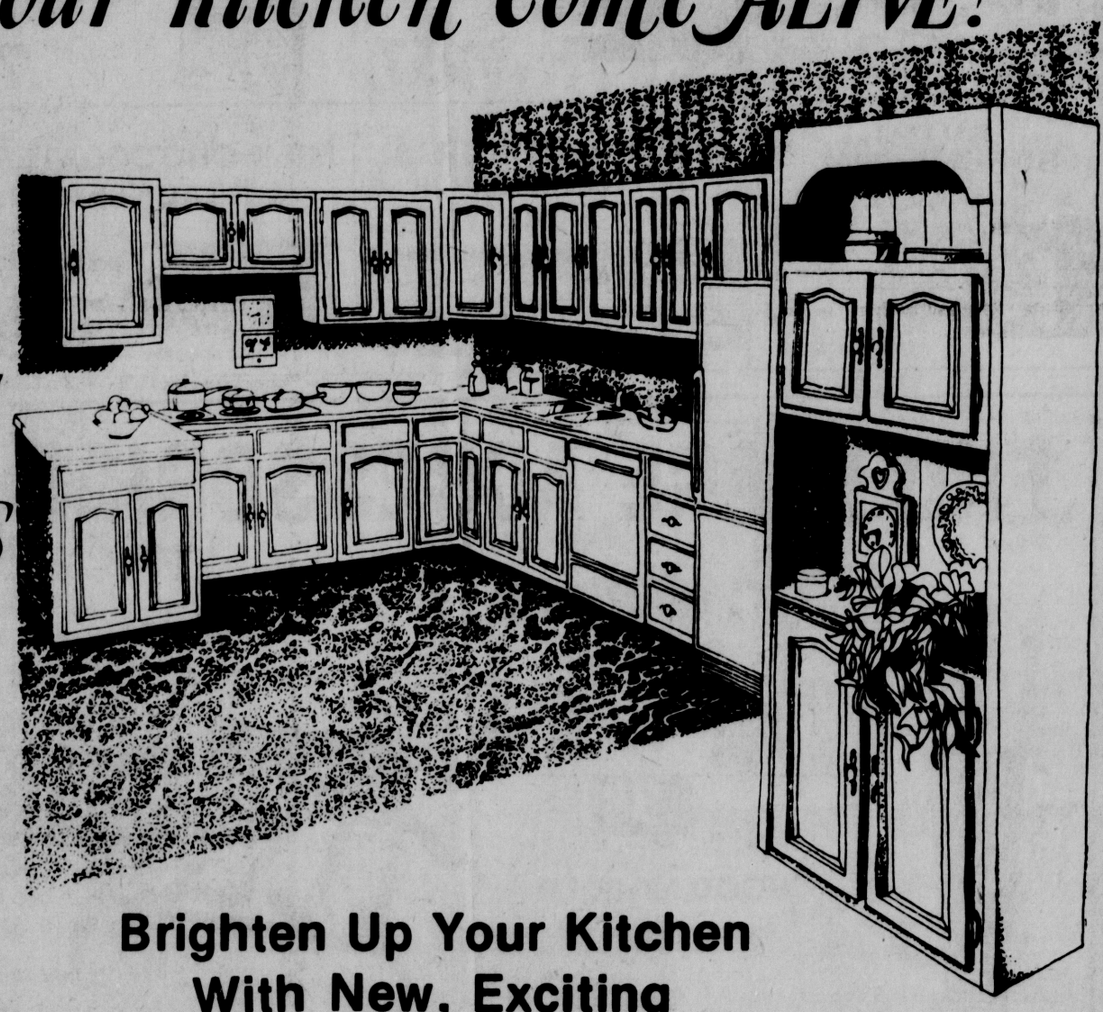

A related issue, Social Security financing, also saw no action. The Congress recognizes the serious financial problems facing the Social Security trust fund. We did not agree with President Ford's proposed solution (raising taxes), but neither did we come up with an answer of our own.

Congress will be back to work on these unsolved problems in January. Hopefully, with a little more positive assistance from the Administration, the 95th Congress will enact some solutions.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Honor your marriage and its vows, and be pure; for God will surely punish all those who are immoral or commit adultery. Stay away from the love of money; be satisfied with what you have. For God has said, "I will never, never fail you nor forsake you." That is why we can say without any doubt or fear, "The Lord is my Helper and I am not afraid of anything that mere man can do to me." Remember your leaders who have taught you the Word of God. Think of all the good that has come from their lives, and try to trust the Lord as they do.

THE 94TH CONGRESS -- PART II

In my last column, I discussed some of the achievements of the recently-adjourned 94th Congress. In this column, I would like to talk about some of the things this past Congress did not achieve.

The 94th Congress was the busiest ever, spending more time in session and recording more votes than any previous Congress. But it was not one of the most productive Congresses, in terms of major legislation enacted. One of the main reasons for this was the continuing stalemate between Congress and President Ford.

In some ways, this continuing conflict produced positive results. For example, the Congress refused to accept the President's energy proposals, which relied on higher consumer prices and fatter energy company profits to solve all problems. Congress refused to decontrol the price of oil and natural gas, rejected the Ford proposal to abandon allocation programs, and forced the President to rescind the costly and ineffective oil tariff. Congress also rejected the Rockefeller plan for a $100 billion subsidy of private energy development.

But, there also was a negative side to the energy picture. While the Congress did achieve some specific energy goals (such as authorizing a number of energy conservation, research and development programs), it did not come up with a comprehensive energy policy. In my view, development of such a policy must be one of the first priorities of the 95th Congress.

In the area of food stamp and welfare reform, we again faced a lack of constructive policy proposals from the Administration. The Senate came up with its own legislation to reduce food stamp fraud, but the House failed to act on the measure. Several Senators offered general welfare reform packages but none were enacted.

Until we clean up Medicare and Medicaid, it seems unlikely that we will be able to deal with the overall problem of rising health care costs. Proposals such as the Kennedy plan for first-dollar health care coverage generated many speeches in the 94th Congress, but many Senators (myself included) agree that such a proposal is beyond our means. Specific proposals for less ambitious programs (such as coverage of catastrophic illnesses only) were not forthcoming.

A related issue, Social Security financing, also saw no action. The Congress recognizes the serious financial problems facing the Social Security trust fund. We did not agree with President Ford's proposed solution (raising taxes), but neither did we come up with an answer of our own.

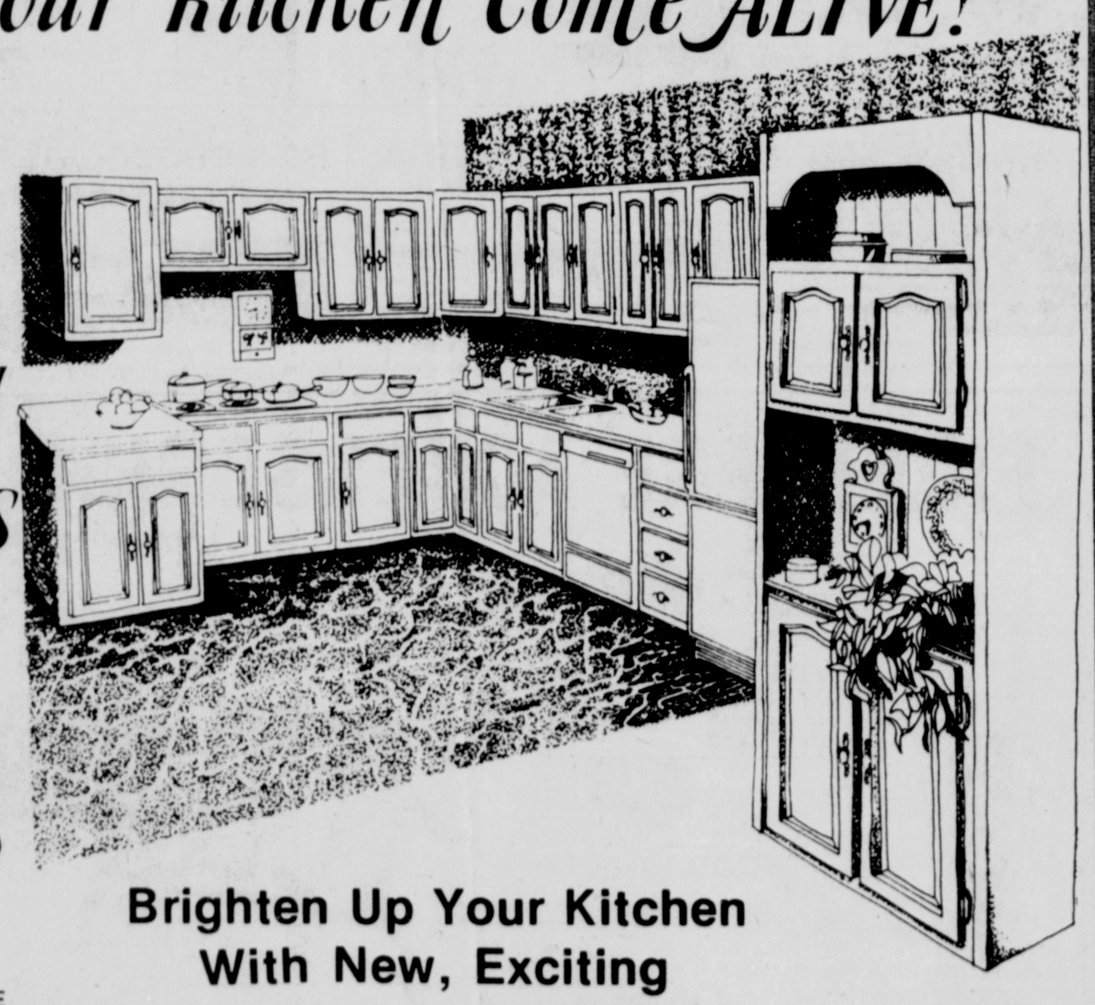

Congress will be back to work on these unsolved problems in January. Hopefully, with a little more positive assistance from the Administration, the 95th Congress will enact some solutions.

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS

A vote for names of candidates for president and vice-president is a vote for the electors of that party, the names of whom are on file with the secretary of state.

On receipt of his ballot the voter shall forthwith, and without leaving the enclosed space, retire alone to one of the voting booths provided, and shall prepare his ballot for voting in the following manner:

STRAIGHT TICKET

Should the voter desire to vote a "straight" party ticket he shall place a cross (X) mark in the circle immediately below the party name.

SPLIT TICKET

If the voter desires to vote for one or more candidates on more than one party ticket, by voting what is commonly called a "split ticket" he may place a cross (X) mark in the circle immediately below one party name and mark cross (X) marks in the squares at the left of the names of candidates on other tickets for whom he wishes to vote.

Where there are two or more candidates for like office in a group, a cross (X) mark in the square to the left of a candidate's name automatically votes against the candidate whose name appears within the same horizontal lines in the column under the circle in which appears the cross (X) mark, unless the voter indicates another candidate to be voted against by drawing a line through such candidate's name.

WRITE-INS

If the voter desires to vote for one or more candidates whose name or names do not appear on the printed ballot he may do so by drawing a line through the printed name of candidate for such office, and writing below such canceled name the name of person for whom he desires to vote, and placing a cross mark in the square at the left of such name. The squares so marked shall take precedence over the cross marked in the circle.

All candidates of the party whose circle is marked shall be counted as voted for excepting where squares are crossed preceding the names of the candidates in other columns. If two or more candidates for the same office are thus designated, neither shall be counted. If the cross (X) is not placed in the circle immediately below the party name at the head of the column, but does appear in the squares opposite the various candidates' names, then only these names shall be counted for, and none other. A cross (X) mark is any line crossing any other line at any angle within the voting space, and no ballot shall be declared void because a cross (X) mark therein is irregular in form.

It is unlawful to deface or tear a ballot in any manner or to erase any printed name (except as provided above in this section), figure, word or letter therefrom, or to erase any mark made thereon by the voter, or to enclose in the folded ballot any other paper or any article. If the voter defaces or tears a ballot, or wrongly marks the name or makes an erasure therein, he may obtain one additional ballot on returning to a judge in charge of the ballots the one so defaced or wrongly marked. He shall at once mark and vote the ballot and the spoiled ballot shall be marked "void" in the voter's presence. A person who does not vote a ballot delivered to him shall, before leaving the polling place, return the unvoted ballot to the judges having charge of the ballots.

A ballot placed in the ballot box without any marks shall not be counted. Ballots shall be counted only for the person for whom the marks thereon are applicable; when a voter places a mark against two or more names for the same office, and only one candidate is to be chosen for the office, none of the candidates is deemed to have been voted for and the ballot shall not be counted for either candidate.

Before leaving the booth the voter shall fold his ballot in such a manner as to conceal his marks thereon. He shall mark his ballot without undue delay. He shall then deposit his ballot in the ballot box being used at that time and shall quit and leave the enclosed place as soon as possible.

Chief suggest water check

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "Something in the water" or "something in the lobby" at the Philadelphia hotel where delegates stayed last summer may have been partly responsible for the mysterious Legionnaires' disease, says the chief medical detective on the case.

"I would strongly suggest something in the water at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel or something in the lobby, probably airborne," Dr. David W. Fraser said Wednesday of the origin of the disease that struck about 180 people and killed 29.

Fraser, an epidemiologist from the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, stressed that many other factors are still being investigated and no firm conclusions have been drawn.

"But we are focusing our attention on these two areas," he told a gathering at the American Public Health Association convention here.

Fraser said the typical delegate at the state American Legion convention did much of his socializing in the hotel's lobby, even though he may have utayed elsewhere.

Those who stayed in other hotels also had occasion to drink the Bellevue-Stratford water during their lobby visits, he said.

But he noted there were strong arguments against the theories.

"There are a lot of things for and against the water and the time spent in the lobby," he said. "For instance, 40 per cent of the cases studied didn't drink any of the water. And none of the hotel's lobby employes became ill."

He said the fact that lobby employes showed no signs of the malady, with its high fever and coughing, could be due to their ages, generally much younger than the typical legionnaire.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "Something in the water" or "something in the lobby" at the Philadelphia hotel where delegates stayed last summer may have been partly responsible for the mysterious Legionnaires' disease, says the chief medical detective on the case.

"I would strongly suggest something in the water at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel or something in the lobby, probably airborne," Dr. David W. Fraser said Wednesday of the origin of the disease that struck about 180 people and killed 29.

Fraser, an epidemiologist from the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, stressed that many other factors are still being investigated and no firm conclusions have been drawn.

"But we are focusing our attention on these two areas," he told a gathering at the American Public Health Association convention here.

Fraser said the typical delegate at the state American Legion convention did much of his socializing in the hotel's lobby, even though he may have utayed elsewhere.

Those who stayed in other hotels also had occasion to drink the Bellevue-Stratford water during their lobby visits, he said.

But he noted there were strong arguments against the theories.

"There are a lot of things for and against the water and the time spent in the lobby," he said. "For instance, 40 per cent of the cases studied didn't drink any of the water. And none of the hotel's lobby employes became ill."

He said the fact that lobby employes showed no signs of the malady, with its high fever and coughing, could be due to their ages, generally much younger than the typical legionnaire.

'You've got to be kidding

"You've got to be kidding" is what Mr. Silhouette seems to be thinking after his master, Tom Becker, has fitted (and not very well) him with a full-size western saddle. Becker says the market for miniature horses is good — mostly for children's pets and zoos. The American Miniature Horse Association also stages shows, and Mr. Silhouette recently took second place in a national show in the 3-year-old stallion under 32 inches class.

OUTGREW AMBITION

Tom Becker of Winona stands astride Mr. Silhouette, who is a mere 28 inches at the shoulders. Becker, 58, a retired marine engineer, literally outgrew his ambition to be a jockey when he was 16 and 6 feet 3 inches tall. In retirement, however, he turned to raising miniature horses as a hobby, and his greatest ambition now is to produce the nation's smallest horse.

Labor Day, the first Monday in September, was set aside to honor workers of the country in 1882.

Raises smallest horses in Missouri

Owner says 'horses look up to him'

WINONA, Mo. (AP) — When Tom Becker says his horses look up to him, it's easy to believe. Becker stands 6 feet, 3 inches tall and the average horse in his herd is about 30 inches tall at the shoulder.

Becker, a 58-year-old retired marine engineer, raises what are among the smallest horses in Missouri. He says his remaining goal in life is to produce the smallest horse in the country, hopefully shorter than 19 inches.

He said his unusual hobby began after he saw an article on miniature horses in a magazine in his dentist's waiting room.

He soon had three of the "minis" in his backyard. They brought an end to the boredom that had filled his retirement.

Becker's hobby has turned into a business. He recently sold half his herd of 18 and has found that buyers range from people looking for pets for their children to zoos that want the small horses for novelties in their "petting zoos."

Becker said small horses fetch a good price — generally between $250 and $1,500.

You can also show them as you do a larger horse, Becker said. His herd stallion, a 28-inch horse named Mr. Silhouette, took second place in the over 3-year-old and under 32-inch division at the National Mini Horse Show in Shelbyville, Ind. Another stallion took top honors in its division.

Becker also uses the horses in teams to pull a variety of wagons in local parades.

But Becker said their biggest advantage over their larger relatives is that they are what horsemen call "easy keepers." His horses require nothing but grass for feed when it's plentiful. During the winter months they get only a pound of grain and a little hay. One bale of hay feeds 10 horses.

Becker figures it costs him 17 or 18 cents a day per animal to feed the herd.

"That's less than it costs to feed a car or dog," he said.

The minis weigh only 15 to 18 pounds at birth and stand about as many inches tall. That enables the owner to pick them up and carry them, so they get used to being handled quicker than larger horses.

Becker starts training them the day they are born and has them in a halter and trained to follow him on a rope at 10 days. He said that gives them a good disposition toward people.

In the late 1800's, ponies were being imported from Europe, Becker said, with some very small animals among them. There was a demand for the smallest ones for use in the Virginia coal mines, so a man named Norman Fields bred and raised the miniature horses for the mines for 53 years. He gave the breed its beginning.

Becker said there are probably 2,000 miniatures in the U.S., but only about 400 of them are under 30 inches. The minis are recognized as a breed and any mature horse shorter than 34 inches can be registered as a miniature horse.

CBS gives ax to 'Ball, Four, 'Doc'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a surprise move to regain its old ratings glory, CBS has axed "Ball Four" and "Doc," put the "Blue Knight" in doubt and revamped its Wednesday and Saturday schedules.

The changes came only a month into the new season as part of CBS' effort to recapture the top ratings slot it has held 20 years. This season, it's been No. 3 three weeks and was No. 2 last week.

It moved its hit "All in the Family" and new "Alice" from Wednesdays to Saturday nights to battle ABC's high-rated "Starsky and Hutch." The battle starts on Nov. 6.

On that night, the "Mary Tyler Moore" and "Bob Newhart" shows, adult comedies which hadn't worked against ABC's cop show, start appearing earlier in television's so-called "family hour."

"The Jeffersons," now CBS' lead-off show on Saturday nights, was rescheduled to follow "Good Times" on Wednesdays, effective Nov. 10, which puts two black family comedies on in the same hour.

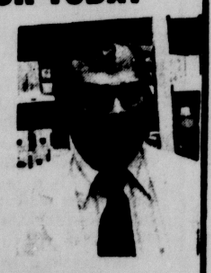

CBS also bumped "Blue Knight" for a Wednesday movie series starting Nov. 10 with "Death Wish." It said the future of "Blue Knight" will be announced later.

A CBS spokeswoman who announced CBS' shifts Wednesday said she didn't know whether other changes will be made soon. CBS' axing of "Ball Four," a new series that starred former New York Yankee baseball pitcher Jim Bouton, and "Doc," in its second season, made CBS the first to cut shows this season. Both were low-rated and the ax was expected, although not so quickly.

NBC, which earlier said it expects no changes for several weeks, modified that Wednesday to an ambiguous "no changes are planned at this time" when asked if CBS' move will hasten its moves.

ABC, top-rated since the season began, said, "If there are any changes to be made, it won't happen for several weeks."

"HEALTH TIPS"

Can colds be avoided? Colds increase when the winter heating season begins, because the dry air in heated rooms parches the nose and throat membranes, which are then more susceptible to virus infection. Dry mucous membranes cannot clean themselves by action of their cilia (hairlike structures) that move mucous upward out of the respiratory system, clearing away germs and viruses. If homes, schools, and places of work can be humidified to about 40% it should help to reduce the common cold infection.

NBC, which earlier said it expects no changes for several weeks, modified that Wednesday to an ambiguous "no changes are planned at this time" when asked if CBS' move will hasten its moves.

ABC, top-rated since the season began, said, "If there are any changes to be made, it won't happen for several weeks."

Labor Day, the first Monday in September, was set aside to honor workers of the country in 1882.

Raises smallest horses in Missouri

Owner says 'horses look up to him'

WINONA, Mo. (AP) — When Tom Becker says his horses look up to him, it's easy to believe. Becker stands 6 feet, 3 inches tall and the average horse in his herd is about 30 inches tall at the shoulder.

Becker, a 58-year-old retired marine engineer, raises what are among the smallest horses in Missouri. He says his remaining goal in life is to produce the smallest horse in the country, hopefully shorter than 19 inches.

He said his unusual hobby began after he saw an article on miniature horses in a magazine in his dentist's waiting room.

He soon had three of the "minis" in his backyard. They brought an end to the boredom that had filled his retirement.

Becker's hobby has turned into a business. He recently sold half his herd of 18 and has found that buyers range from people looking for pets for their children to zoos that want the small horses for novelties in their "petting zoos."

Becker said small horses fetch a good price — generally between $250 and $1,500.

You can also show them as you do a larger horse, Becker said. His herd stallion, a 28-inch horse named Mr. Silhouette, took second place in the over 3-year-old and under 32-inch division at the National Mini Horse Show in Shelbyville, Ind. Another stallion took top honors in its division.

Becker also uses the horses in teams to pull a variety of wagons in local parades.

But Becker said their biggest advantage over their larger relatives is that they are what horsemen call "easy keepers." His horses require nothing but grass for feed when it's plentiful. During the winter months they get only a pound of grain and a little hay. One bale of hay feeds 10 horses.

Becker figures it costs him 17 or 18 cents a day per animal to feed the herd.

"That's less than it costs to feed a car or dog," he said.

The minis weigh only 15 to 18 pounds at birth and stand about as many inches tall. That enables the owner to pick them up and carry them, so they get used to being handled quicker than larger horses.

Becker starts training them the day they are born and has them in a halter and trained to follow him on a rope at 10 days. He said that gives them a good disposition toward people.

In the late 1800's, ponies were being imported from Europe, Becker said, with some very small animals among them. There was a demand for the smallest ones for use in the Virginia coal mines, so a man named Norman Fields bred and raised the miniature horses for the mines for 53 years. He gave the breed its beginning.

Becker said there are probably 2,000 miniatures in the U.S., but only about 400 of them are under 30 inches. The minis are recognized as a breed and any mature horse shorter than 34 inches can be registered as a miniature horse.

"HEALTH TIPS"

Can colds be avoided? Colds increase when the winter heating season begins, because the dry air in heated rooms parches the nose and throat membranes, which are then more susceptible to virus infection. Dry mucous membranes cannot clean themselves by action of their cilia (hairlike structures) that move mucous upward out of the respiratory system, clearing away germs and viruses. If homes, schools, and places of work can be humidified to about 40% it should help to reduce the common cold infection.

Nets agree to sell Dr. J. to Philadelphia 76'ers for $3 million

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Nets have reached a written agreement in principle to sell their star forward, Julius Erving, to the Philadelphia 76ers, National Basketball Association Deputy Commissioner Simon Gourdine said early today.

Contacted at home by The Associated Press, Gourdine issued the following statement:

"I have spoken to the parties, the Philadelphia 76ers and the New York Nets and their respective counsel, and they have reached an agreement in principle regarding the transfer of Julius Erving's contract," Gourdine said.

He added, however, that some details of the arrangement were still to be worked out by a negotiating team that started its work in earnest at 9:30 p.m., EDT, Wednesday night.

"It's subject to the working out of some further details," Gourdine said.

The NBA deputy commissioner, who approves most NBA deals, added that "the questions I asked were answered satisfactorily," by the group of negotiators.

"There are still some points they're working on," he added, indicating that the group continued to work through the morning hours to complete the transaction with the opening of the NBA season mere hours away.

The sale of the dazzling frontcourt man made Erving the NBA's $6.6 million man, sources say.

The deal reportedly will pay Nets owner Roy Boe $3 million in cash and will give the 6-foot-7 superstar a six-year contract at $600,000 per season. It is believed that such a contract would make Erving the highest-paid player in pro basketball, surmountng the reported $500,000 per year paid Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Nets had given the Lakers, Milwaukee Bucks and the 76ers permission to talk to Erving and his agent, Irwin Weiner, after Erving refused to report to training camp unless his current contract was renegotiated.

The Bucks considered themselves in the running as late as Wednesday, according to majority stockholder James Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald said he offered to pay Boe "more than $2 million to buy the existing contract and then deal with Erving to renegotiate it."

But that offer was exceeded by the bankroll of 76ers owner F. Eugene Dixon, wh reportedly is worth $150 million.

The transaction will make Dixon's payroll one of the highest in sports history, considering the weighty salaries of a team that also includes George McGinnis, Caldwell Jones, Doug Collins, Fred Carter and Darryl Dawkins.

McGinnis, who shared the American Basketball Association Most Valuable Player award with Erving in the 1974-75 season, reacted strongly when informed of the deal.

"Me and the Doctor ... Oh my God," he said.

There was no immediate comment from Boe, who eased his financially troubled situation but suffered the staggering loss of his major drawing card at the club's Nassau Coliseum home in Uniondale, N.Y.

The shock waves of Erving's non-appearance already were beginning to be felt by Tuesday, when CBS cancelled its scheduled network telecast of Friday night's season opener between the Nets and Golden State Warriors in Oakland.

No Dr. J, no TV.

By Tuesday, 76ers General Manager Pat Williams had been in contact with Boe, and the negotiations intensified as time went on.

Late Wednesday evening, Erving was quoted as saying, "John Q. Cash did it. I'm on my way to Philadelphia."

But that was before the negotiations had been completed and the agreement offered for validation to Gourdine. That detail was not eliminated until 8:15 a.m., EDT, Thursday, nearly 12 hours after the meetings had begun.

Impatient Reds want to wrap up Series with win tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The Summer Game has become a waiting game and the wait could end tonight.

The World Series of 1976, lacking the drama that most of the October Classics usually bring, took a night off Wednesday, pleasing nobody.

Not the all-but-champion Cincinnati Reds.

Not the all-but-bored fans.

"I don't like a day off. I would like to get it over with. The season's over. I want to go home," Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion said after Wednesday night's game was washed out.

"A postponement doesn't do a thing for us now," said manager Billy Martin, whose Yankees face the prospect of being swept in four games, the first team to go under in four straight since Baltimore rolled over Los Angeles in 1966.

"Why did you call the game off?" asked one upstate New York fan, telephoning Bowie Kuhn's office shortly after the Commissioner's 2 p.m. decision to postpone the game.

Tonight's game begins at 8:30 p.m. EDT. If a fifth game is necessary, it would be played Friday. But when Friday is not known.

Because of the debate between presidential candidates Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford, the game originally scheduled for 8:30 p.m. may be pushed up to an afternoon or twilight starting time.

The Reds came into this Series trying to achieve a feat unmatched by a National League team since the 1921-22 New York Giants, namely to win successive World Series.

Now the Yankees are trying to achieve a feat never before accomplished in the Series' 72-year history, namely to win a championship after losing the first three games.

The Yanks say they are not about to roll over and play dead. "We're not quitters," says Martin. "I am not a quitter and my guys aren't. We have been a comeback club all year." And second baseman Willie Randolph adds, "We can play our game - and come back."

But Will McEnaney, the reliever who took over for rookie Pat Zachry and nailed down Cincinnati's 6-2 victory Tuesday night, sees things differently.

The Yankees, he, says can't keep playing their game because it hasn't worked.

"The pressure is really on them now," McEnaney says. "They have to throw away their game plan and start from scratch."

The Reds are sticking with their game plan. That means Gary Nolan will be pitching for them tonight. If Martin sticks to his plan, Ed Figueroa will be the Yankee starter. But the rain delay has given him an option. He could start Catfish Hunter.

Sparky Anderson, the outspoken manager of the Reds, thinks this Series should have ended a long time ago. "The Series should be over by October 1," he says. "That would be best for everybody. But then it is not my job to run baseball."

His job is to run what he believes is the best team in several decades.

"I'd like to win the Series in four games," he told newsmen Wednesday. "In order to make you ask the question, 'Are we as good as the old Dodger and Yankee teams of the 1950s?'"

Expect cold weather

NEW YORK (AP) — The fourth game of the World Series between the Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees, postponed because of rain, was expected to be played tonight — but under chilly weather conditions.

The National Weather Service said today that temperatures in the low 40s, with winds at 20 to 30 miles per hour and stronger gusts, and partly cloudy skies, were expected for the game, which was postponed Wednesday night.

The Reds won the first three games of the best-of-seven series and need only one more victory to become baseball champions for the second year in a row.

The unheralded Platte City squad, fired up by a challenge from Maxwell, used a late pass interception and clutch defense to dump Kearney, the No. 3 Class 2A team, 21-19.

Maxwell was more than happy with the surprise victory — but the outcome of his wager with his players was a different matter.

"I told the team Tuesday in practice that if we won I would walk home," said Maxwell.

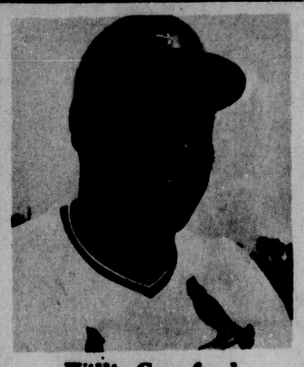

"I just thought it would give them more incentive to win the game. I guess it did."

Accompanied by his assistant coach, Frank Buell, and three other school officials, the 46-year-old Maxwell set out about 5 p.m. on the 26-mile trek back to Platte City.

The first nine miles were easy. And the next four, after a brief lunch, weren't bad. But it was all uphill after that.

"The kids from the football team came by and wanted us to stop," said Maxwell. "But if I had I would never have heard the end of it. If you say you are going to do something you must go on with it."

It was 1:40 a.m. Sunday before they approached the Platte City High School, but the five men still had enough strength to run up the driveway where about 50 persons waited for them.

Cards complete six-player swap with Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Series isn't over yet and major league baseball teams already are making trades.

The St. Louis Cardinals and San Francisco Giants worked out a six-player swap Wednesday with the Giants obtaining oktfielders Willie Crawford and Vic Harris and pitcher John Curtis from St. Louis in exchange for pitchers John D'Aquisto and Mike Caldwell and catcher Dave Rader. It was the first transaction since the close of the season.

The trade was announced here because officials for both teams were in New York for the World Series.

Crawford, who went to the Cards prior to the 1976 season in a trade with the Los Angeles Dodgers, is the key man in the deal. The Giants probably will lose free agent outfielder Gary Matthews and felt the need for another outfielder. Crawford batted .304 for St. Louis with nine homers and 39 runs batted in.

"Crawford is a proven player," said Giants' co-owner Bob Lurie. "We are delighted to have him."

Harris, a part-timer with the Cards, hit .228 with a homer and 19 RBI, while Curtis, who formerly pitched for the Boston Red Sox, was 6-11 with a 4.50 earned run average.

Vern Rapp, the Cardinals' new manager, admitted he hadn't seen D'Aquisto or Caldwell pitch, but said they were the major considerations in the deal.

"Pitching has been a sore point with the Cardinals," Rapp said. "Both of these guys had arm operations, but we feel they will be able to help us."

Both D'Aquisto and Caldwell are coming off poor seasons with the Giants. D'Aquisto was 3-8 with 5.35 ERA. Caldwell was 1-7 and had a 4.86 ERA.

Rader, the Giants' regular catcher for the past five years, hit a disappointing .263 in 1976. He hit .291 in 1974 and 1975.

"Rader is a quality player, a good backup who also can be a regular catcher if necessary," said Rapp, who has Ted Simmons to handle the first-string catching chores.

Littell won't let misfortune in playoffs ruin his first season

By CHARLIE FRANCIS

KANSAS CITY — It was a scene Kansas City Royals baseball fans won't forget for quite awhile.

Thursday, Oct. 14. Yankee Stadium in New York. The final game of the American League Championship Series. Bottom of the ninth.

The Royals had tied the score in the previous inning when reliable George Brett swatted a three-run homer to make the score 6-6. Things looked good for the Royals, who had their best relief pitcher, Mark Littell, on the mound.

But Chris Chambliss changed things with one swing of the bat. The Yankee first baseman picked on the first pitch from the rookie righthander--a high fast ball--and powered it over the right field wall. The Royals' American League pennant hopes were gone.

"I felt empty inside," said Littell, who hails from Gideon (despite what Howard Cosell, Keith Jackson and Reggie Jackson say). "I went off to be by myself for awhile."

But, despite the initial disappointment of being knocked out of the playoffs and being denied a chance to perform in the World Series, Littell says he doesn't feel bad about the events in New York.

"I gave it my best shot," Littell told the Standard Wednesday from his suburban Kansas City home where he and wife Marsha reside.

The handsome reliver, who takes the mound to the tune of John Denver's "Thank God I'm a Country Boy" when pitching at Royals Stadium, refuses to second-guess himself about the pitch that Chambliss hit for the dramatic homer.

"It was the same kind of pitch that he (Chambliss) missed two nights before," Mark said of the high fastball.

"This time he was looking for it, and he hit it. That's baseball."

Oddly enough, Littell said that the pitch was one of the best fastballs he threw all night. "He got under it a little bit, but the ball really carries in Yankee Stadium." Chambliss' towering blast dropped just out of the reach of the outstretched arm of Royal rightfielder Hal McRae and barely over the wall.

"If I had it to do all over again, I'd probably throw him the same pitch," Littell insisted.

Chambliss' home run was only the second hit all season off Littell, who emerged as the Royals' top relief pitcher after making the transition to the bullpen during spring training. "Pedro Garcia of Detroit hit one off me before," Littell recalled. "It was kind of a freaky thing."

While the playoffs may not have turned out just like he might have wanted, Littell says he has no gripes at all about his rookie season on the whole. "I had no idea in the spring that things would turn out like this," Littell admitted, referring to the Royals' division championship and thrilling playoff series.

The hard-throwing righthander (he says his fastball has been clocked at 98 miles per hour) certainly has a right to be pleased with his individual statistics as well.

His 7-3 record and 15 saves were best on the Kansas City staff. And his sparkling 2.08 earned run average was only the best in both the National and American Leagues.

Mark said that the pressure of the playoffs was good for him. "I enjoy the challenge. I hope I'm in the same situation next season."

"Country Boy", as he is nicknamed, said that he appreciates all the calls and mail that Southeast Missouri folks have sent him this season. "Tell 'em I'd be glad to talk to them if they come to the ballpark next season."

He also reaffirmed the fact that he has not forgotten about Gideon. "I guess I'll have to straighten those guys at ABC out," he joked, referring to the statement on national television that Mark is from Cape Girardeau.

For the next few months, baseball will take a back seat in Littell's life. He is attending classes at Long View Junior College in Kansas City, preparing for a possible career in coaching when his playing days are over. "You never know when it'll happen," Mark said, referring to the possibility of injury. "One pitch, and that could be it."

For the American League hitters who have been the victims of Littell's rookie season success, that day won't come too soon.

Four games scheduled

NBA season opens tonight

AP Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics, bloodied and battered but as yet unbowed, begin defense of their National Basketball Association championship tonight when they take on the Indiana Pacers in one of four National Basketball Association season openers.

Three new coaches will be involved in tonight's other games, all of them making their debuts on the road.

The Los Angeles Lakers, with Jerry West at the helm, take on the New York Knicks; the Houston Rockets open under Tom Nissalke against the Atlanta Hawks, and the Buffalo Braves, led by Tates Locke, meet the Milwaukee Bucks.

Boston, which beat Phoenix in six games in the playoff finals last spring, is not in the best of shape right now.

Center Dave Cowens and forward John Havlicek, the 36-year-old team captain, are both questionable for the opener because of back problems. Cowens worked out with the club Wednesday after missing a number of preseason games, but Havlicek did not take part in that final practice session.

Power forward Paul Silas was traded to Denver Wednesday in a three-way deal that brings Curtis Rowe from Detroit, but Rowe isn't expected to play in the opener.

Sidney Wicks, purchased from Portland last week in an effort to bolster the frontcourt, will start at one forward position, although he has been hampered by a groin pull. "He'll go as far as he can, but we don't know how far that will be," a Celtics spokesman said.

Havlicek and Cowens are also penciled in as starters, but if they can't make it veterans Steve Kuberski and Jim Ard will get the call.

Indiana, meanwhile, has its own problems. Perhaps the least imposing of the four ABA teams to be admitted to the expanded NBA, the Pacers were further weakened by the loss of starting center Len Elmore and reserve guard Kevin Joyce, both of whom are out for the season with knee injuries.

That puts more of a burden on Billy Knight, the brilliant forward who was second in the ABA in scoring last season with a 28.1 average. And he's been hurting lately, a sprained ankle forcing him to miss the Pacers' final preseason test.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, coming off perhaps his best season ever when he won Most Valuable Player honors for the fourth time, is again the focus of things on the Lakers. He finished the preseason with a 28-point effort against Phoneix and appears in top form.

Guard Lucius Allen has also looked good in preseason, averaging 14 points and six steals.

The Lakers were unable to obtain the power forward they sought during the offseason, but did pick up a couple of competent guards from the ABA in playmaker Mack Calvin and defense-minded Don Chaney, the ex-Celtic. And Wednesday,they announcing the signing of guard Dwight "Bo" Lamar, another former ABA player.

The Knicks also failed to get the big man they were looking for. Instead, Coach Red Holzman has been using Spencer Haywood at center and also testing rookie Lonnie Shelton in the middle. Their top newcomer is 6-5 forward Jim McMillian, purchased from Buffalo, whose team-oriented style is exactly what Holzman likes.

Houston and Atlanta are both strong in the backcourt and weak under the boards. Mike Newlin, Calvin Murphy and No. 1 draftee John Lucas are the Rockets' guards, while Tom Henderson, Lou Hudson, Ken Charles and top rookie Armond Hill are Atlanta's backliners. The Hawks also have Geoff Petrie, the former Portland all-star, but he's temporarily shelved with a knee injury.

The unheralded Platte City squad, fired up by a challenge from Maxwell, used a late pass interception and clutch defense to dump Kearney, the No. 3 Class 2A team, 21-19.

Maxwell was more than happy with the surprise victory — but the outcome of his wager with his players was a different matter.

"I told the team Tuesday in practice that if we won I would walk home," said Maxwell.

"I just thought it would give them more incentive to win the game. I guess it did."

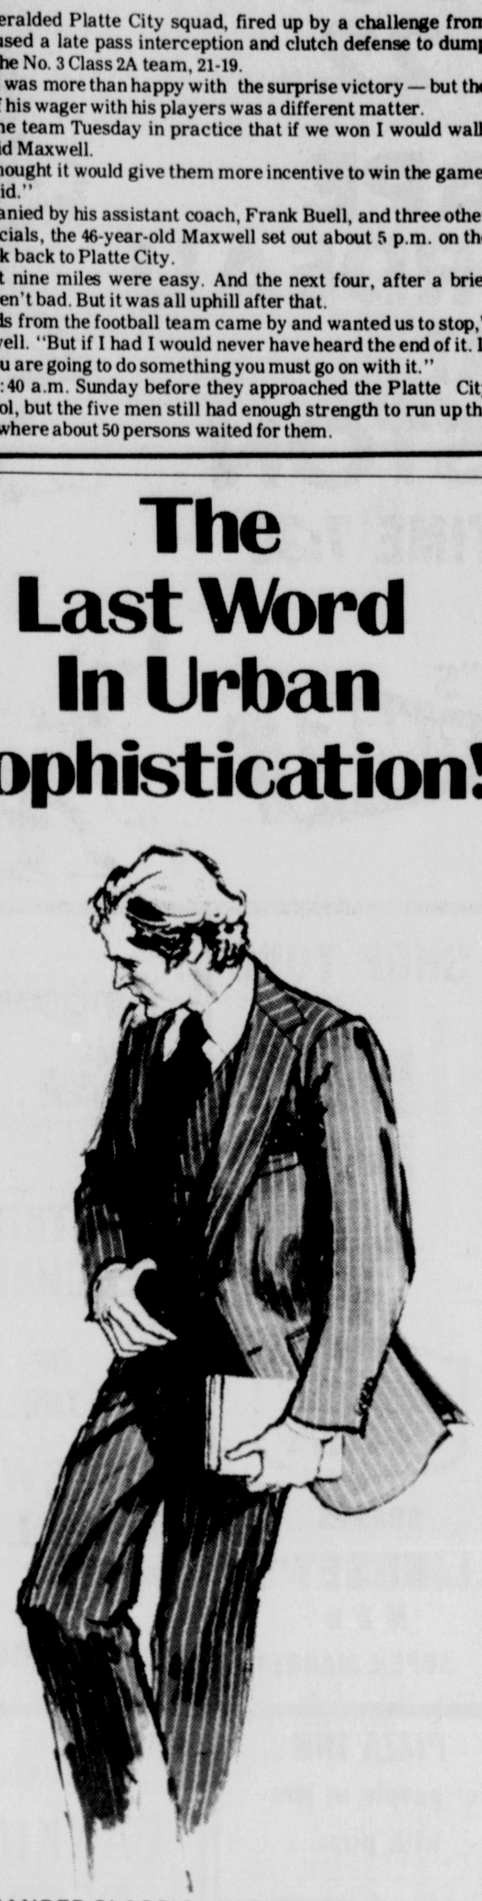

Accompanied by his assistant coach, Frank Buell, and three other school officials, the 46-year-old Maxwell set out about 5 p.m. on the 26-mile trek back to Platte City.

The first nine miles were easy. And the next four, after a brief lunch, weren't bad. But it was all uphill after that.

"The kids from the football team came by and wanted us to stop," said Maxwell. "But if I had I would never have heard the end of it. If you say you are going to do something you must go on with it."

It was 1:40 a.m. Sunday before they approached the Platte City High School, but the five men still had enough strength to run up the driveway where about 50 persons waited for them.

Cards complete six-player swap with Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Series isn't over yet and major league baseball teams already are making trades.

The St. Louis Cardinals and San Francisco Giants worked out a six-player swap Wednesday with the Giants obtaining oktfielders Willie Crawford and Vic Harris and pitcher John Curtis from St. Louis in exchange for pitchers John D'Aquisto and Mike Caldwell and catcher Dave Rader. It was the first transaction since the close of the season.

The trade was announced here because officials for both teams were in New York for the World Series.

Harris, a part-timer with the Cards, hit .228 with a homer and 19 RBI, while Curtis, who formerly pitched for the Boston Red Sox, was 6-11 with a 4.50 earned run average.

Vern Rapp, the Cardinals' new manager, admitted he hadn't seen D'Aquisto or Caldwell pitch, but said they were the major considerations in the deal.

"Pitching has been a sore point with the Cardinals," Rapp said. "Both of these guys had arm operations, but we feel they will be able to help us."

Both D'Aquisto and Caldwell are coming off poor seasons with the Giants. D'Aquisto was 3-8 with 5.35 ERA. Caldwell was 1-7 and had a 4.86 ERA.

Rader, the Giants' regular catcher for the past five years, hit a disappointing .263 in 1976. He hit .291 in 1974 and 1975.

"Rader is a quality player, a good backup who also can be a regular catcher if necessary," said Rapp, who has Ted Simmons to handle the first-string catching chores.

Littell won't let misfortune in playoffs ruin his first season

KANSAS CITY — It was a scene Kansas City Royals baseball fans won't forget for quite awhile.

Thursday, Oct. 14. Yankee Stadium in New York. The final game of the American League Championship Series. Bottom of the ninth.

The Royals had tied the score in the previous inning when reliable George Brett swatted a three-run homer to make the score 6-6. Things looked good for the Royals, who had their best relief pitcher, Mark Littell, on the mound.

Twelve Sikeston players honored

The twelve are Derek Braden, Scott Campbell, Sam Copeland, Joey Dial, Gary Lasater, Jerry Lasater, Chris Launius, Marty Nelson, Michael Smith, Steven Rice, Eddie Wasson and Jeff Young.

Nominations for Athletes of the Year were made earlier this summer by Babe Ruth League managers from across the nation. They were invited to nominate candidates with the best records on their teams or in their leagues. Local managers participating in the nominations were Daris Burgess, Charles Campbell, Jerry Laseter, Bill McDowell and Farrell Wasson.

In 1942, in World War II, the British air force pounded the Italian port of Genoa.

In 1964, funeral services were held in New York City for the 31st American president, Herbert Hoover.

Barbs

By PHIL PASTORET

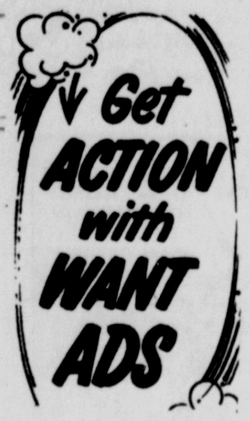

It's time to bring the livestock into the barn — the hunters are abroad in the land.

Keeping your head above water would be much easier if the neighbor didn't come by in his new speedboat every five minutes.

By MARIAN MCDOWELL
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Images and emotional appeals seem to be overshadowing the issues in the Missouri governor's race with the Nov. 2 general election nearing.

"My opponent hasn't come forth with anything other than shallow, emotional appeals founded on no facts. We haven't heard any answers on what he's going to do about education, health care and economic development for this state," Bond said.

Standing stubbornly in Bond's path is the equally critical Joseph Teasdale, an "independent" Democrat, who criticizes Bond for conducting "a nice, cosmetic campaign. I call it plastic politics."

Teasdale does not plan to use a report released by the Democratic State Committee analyzing the Bond administration during this fall's campaign which concludes: "Bond always maintains a very keen eye on his image." Teasdale and the state's Democrats view the Bond administration as one of image rather than substance, and Teasdale constantly has forced Bond into a defensive position by attacking the state's Republican power structure.

The two gubernatorial candidates find their greatest difference over taxes. Bond opposes a proposed amendment on the November ballot that would repeal the sales tax on food and drugs. Teasdale supports the amendment, calling the sales tax a "regressive tax" which punishes the poor. "Regressive means unfair. The poor and middle class pay the same amount as people who have more buying power."

On the other side of the coin, Bond is urging the public not to vote for the sales tax exemption, saying the state cannot afford a $180 million loss in general revenue.

"I have worked with the legislature long enough to know there's no sure guarantee that those taxes will be made up. If the food and drug tax exemption goes through, there will have to be significant tax increases or material cuts in services," Bond said.

The governor said if the amendment passes, he will seek guidance from a tax study commission created by the legislature. Bond believes the tax exemption is not an effective way to aid the poor because it takes money away from education and mental health services serving those in need.

His Democratic challenger has said he will implement new tax reforms to shift the tax burden from the poor and middle class to multi-state corporations.

Teasdale says he will raise corporate taxes by eliminating the federal income tax write-offs for corporations which amount to $50 million. However, he has not spelled out how he will make up the remaining $130 million loss.

Teasdale points out that Missouri is one of only seven states which allows the federal tax write-off for state income tax purposes, however Bond said Missouri's low corporate income taxes have been an important selling point in attracting new industry to the state and providing jobs.

Bond and Teasdale paint very different pictures of the Public Service Commission (PSC). Teasdale has crossed the state charging the PSC with favoring utilities at the expense of consumers.

"In 1975, Union Electric increased its profits by 50 per cent; it's really hard for me to feel sorry for them. The first thing I'll do if I'm elected governor is ask for the immediate resignation of the PSC members. That is the area where people feel most abused," Teasdale said.

Bond said his opponent is attempting to politicize the PSC, an independent regulatory agency. "My opponent has talked about nothing but platitudes. He has implied he can lower peoples' utility rates."

Democrat Teasdale also has challenged Bond repeatedly to disclose the holdings in his blind trust, and has made it his third major campaign issue.

"He (Bond) gives the appearance that he has a conflict of interest by concealing his assets in large corporations. Apparently, he does not want the public to know his sources of income," Teasdale said.

Bond said the blind trust is an accepted method of avoiding conflicts of interest and has been used by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Sen. Charles Percy and the late U.S. Rep. Jerry Litton.

"I do not know what transactions have occurred in that blind trust since I established it," Bond said. "My opponent chooses to misrepresent the nature of the blind trust, and the fact that all of the assets that went into it have been disclosed publicly."

Both candidates are stumping the state in automobiles and airplanes. Because he must divide his time between state affairs and his re-election campaign, Bond often is on the go from early in the morning until late in the evening.

The governor's schedule is loaded with events where large numbers of people gather. In the last weeks of the campaign, Bond has attended picnics, football games, Oktoberfests, pep rallies and parades, shaking hands and asking for voters' support Nov. 2.

In contrast, Teasdale's schedule is much lighter and his appearances usually are planned by his local county coordinators. Most of his campaign exposure has been at local Democratic headquarters across the state.

His campaign audiences, primarily Democrats who already support him, usually number between 50 and 75 people. At these rallies, Teasdale describes himself as "just a simple, ordinary, walkin' politician who's made it to the nomination."

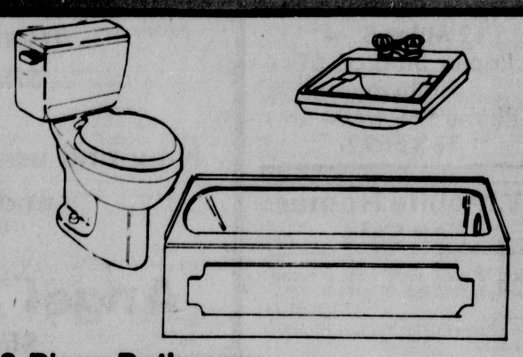

Media advertising blitzes may be a decisive factor in the governor's race. To put his story across, Bond expects to spend near the $421,000 maximum permitted for a gubernatorial campaign, with about 70 per cent of that amount spent on television, radio and newspaper advertising.

Teasdale has raised about $100,000 of his $300,000 goal, most of which will go for political advertising scheduled for the last three weeks of the campaign. Because of money problems, posters, bumper stickers and campaign literature about Teasdale is scarce.

By MARIAN MCDOWELL
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Images and emotional appeals seem to be overshadowing the issues in the Missouri governor's race with the Nov. 2 general election nearing.

"My opponent hasn't come forth with anything other than shallow, emotional appeals founded on no facts. We haven't heard any answers on what he's going to do about education, health care and economic development for this state," Bond said.

Standing stubbornly in Bond's path is the equally critical Joseph Teasdale, an "independent" Democrat, who criticizes Bond for conducting "a nice, cosmetic campaign. I call it plastic politics."

Teasdale does not plan to use a report released by the Democratic State Committee analyzing the Bond administration during this fall's campaign which concludes: "Bond always maintains a very keen eye on his image." Teasdale and the state's Democrats view the Bond administration as one of image rather than substance, and Teasdale constantly has forced Bond into a defensive position by attacking the state's Republican power structure.

The two gubernatorial candidates find their greatest difference over taxes. Bond opposes a proposed amendment on the November ballot that would repeal the sales tax on food and drugs. Teasdale supports the amendment, calling the sales tax a "regressive tax" which punishes the poor. "Regressive means unfair. The poor and middle class pay the same amount as people who have more buying power."

On the other side of the coin, Bond is urging the public not to vote for the sales tax exemption, saying the state cannot afford a $180 million loss in general revenue.

"I have worked with the legislature long enough to know there's no sure guarantee that those taxes will be made up. If the food and drug tax exemption goes through, there will have to be significant tax increases or material cuts in services," Bond said.

The governor said if the amendment passes, he will seek guidance from a tax study commission created by the legislature. Bond believes the tax exemption is not an effective way to aid the poor because it takes money away from education and mental health services serving those in need.

His Democratic challenger has said he will implement new tax reforms to shift the tax burden from the poor and middle class to multi-state corporations.

Teasdale says he will raise corporate taxes by eliminating the federal income tax write-offs for corporations which amount to $50 million. However, he has not spelled out how he will make up the remaining $130 million loss.

Teasdale points out that Missouri is one of only seven states which allows the federal tax write-off for state income tax purposes, however Bond said Missouri's low corporate income taxes have been an important selling point in attracting new industry to the state and providing jobs.

Bond and Teasdale paint very different pictures of the Public Service Commission (PSC). Teasdale has crossed the state charging the PSC with favoring utilities at the expense of consumers.

"In 1975, Union Electric increased its profits by 50 per cent; it's really hard for me to feel sorry for them. The first thing I'll do if I'm elected governor is ask for the immediate resignation of the PSC members. That is the area where people feel most abused," Teasdale said.

PSC members, who regulate the operating procedures and rates of private utilities, are appointed by the governor.

Bond said his opponent is attempting to politicize the PSC, an independent regulatory agency. "My opponent has talked about nothing but platitudes. He has implied he can lower peoples' utility rates."

Democrat Teasdale also has challenged Bond repeatedly to disclose the holdings in his blind trust, and has made it his third major campaign issue.

"He (Bond) gives the appearance that he has a conflict of interest by concealing his assets in large corporations. Apparently, he does not want the public to know his sources of income," Teasdale said.

Bond said the blind trust is an accepted method of avoiding conflicts of interest and has been used by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Sen. Charles Percy and the late U.S. Rep. Jerry Litton.

"I do not know what transactions have occurred in that blind trust since I established it," Bond said. "My opponent chooses to misrepresent the nature of the blind trust, and the fact that all of the assets that went into it have been disclosed publicly."

Both candidates are stumping the state in automobiles and airplanes. Because he must divide his time between state affairs and his re-election campaign, Bond often is on the go from early in the morning until late in the evening.

The governor's schedule is loaded with events where large numbers of people gather. In the last weeks of the campaign, Bond has attended picnics, football games, Oktoberfests, pep rallies and parades, shaking hands and asking for voters' support Nov. 2.

Teasdale has raised about $100,000 of his $300,000 goal, most of which will go for political advertising scheduled for the last three weeks of the campaign. Because of money problems, posters, bumper stickers and campaign literature about Teasdale is scarce.

"It's like rich man-poor man," Teasdale said of his campaign finances. "There's no doubt about it, I am in trouble on campaign money."

Tune-up called best insurance against no-starts, by AAA

Motorists who have followed the regularly scheduled program of car care prescribed in the owner's manual can forget about winterizing, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

"Most 'can't start' calls for assistance are the result of vehicle neglect rather than vehicle failure," AAA notes.

For vehicle owners who have not followed the detailed maintenance instructions in their car owner's manual, AAA offers this 10-point check list for keeping a car in peak operating condition, once it is properly tuned:

1. Check plugs and points regularly. Dirty or worn plugs waste gas and put an added strain on the battery because they require more electricity than clean plugs. If points are worn, they cannot deliver peak power to plugs.

2. Have car's automatic choke cleaned and adjusted. If automatic choke doesn't cut down when engine is warmed up, gasoline is wasted.

3. Inspect the cooling system. Hoses, radiator, pressure cap and thermostat as well as the antifreeze level should be checked regularly.

4. Make sure car battery is fully charged, with terminals clean and secure and water covering battery plates. Battery should be free from cracks or corrosion. Periodic inspections will assure that battery is properly charged.

5. Check voltage regulator. An undercharged battery will fail and an overcharged battery will buckle its cover and bulge the sides, causing leaks.

6. Is the exhaust system noisy? A rusty or leaky muffler or exhaust manifold is a carbon monoxide hazard.

7. Check windshield wipers and washers for proper operation. Worn or poorly functioning wiper blades cut visibility and should be replaced. Water in the windshield washer reservoir should have an added solvent all year long. It not only prevents freezing, but helps wipers remove slush or accumulation for better visibility.

8. Make sure defrosters and heater are working properly.

9. Check fan belt and other belts for proper adjustment and replace them if worn. A slipping belt affects the alternator and operation of the car air conditioner.

10. Have a periodic general safety check made every 10,000 miles, including inspection of brakes, headlights, hoses, turn signals, back-up lights and tires. Check brake and transmission fluid levels and fluid level in the rear axle.

Auto Club points out that a further benefit of a well-maintained automobile is fuel savings. A properly tuned engine will help cut gasoline consumption by one or two gallons per tankful.

The Champion test unit pauses at the Golden Gate Bridge on San Francisco Bay.

Basic guideline list for selecting tires

With both safety and budget in mind, the Tire Industry Safety Council offers some basic tire selection guidelines.

FIRST, go by the book. Before considering options to the tires that came with the car, check the owner's manual, a dealer or the tire instructions affixed to the car.

Tire replacement recommendations for any vehicle should take into account size limitations, car handling efficiency and other safety considerations.

Never select a smaller tire than those that came with the car. It might affect ground clearance, instrument accuracy and the suspension system of the car and is not designed to carry the vehicle load.

There are three tire types or constructions — bias, belted bias and radial tires. All must meet government safety standards.

SECOND, play the tire mating and mixing game correctly.

THIRD, if your old tires wear out before you think they should, have an expert check them to find out why. It may be that better tire maintenance will help you make your new tires last longer.

Drive the right side of the lead car, dragging the other one along, up on the curb, making sure the driver's side wheels of the lead car continue at street level.

By the time the right rear wheel of the lead car mounts the curb, the bumpers will unlock—if you avoid dragging the wheels of the rear car up on the curb.

TURN IN THAT OLD GAS HOG

When you change cars— See Us before you deal if you need financing

There comes a time in the life of every car when it needs to be retired to a less demanding role. If your car is at or nearing this cross-roads in its life and you prefer not to tie up your working funds or find them inadequate, see us for considerate car financing.

Never select a smaller tire than those that came with the car. It might affect ground clearance, instrument accuracy and the suspension system of the car and is not designed to carry the vehicle load.

There are three tire types or constructions — bias, belted bias and radial tires. All must meet government safety standards.

SECOND, play the tire mating and mixing game correctly.

It is best to try and keep the same construction and size of tire on all four wheels.

If a pair of radial tires is used with bias or belted bias tires, the radials always go on the rear axle.

THIRD, if your old tires wear out before you think they should, have an expert check them to find out why. It may be that better tire maintenance will help you make your new tires last longer.

Locked bumpers unmesh easily

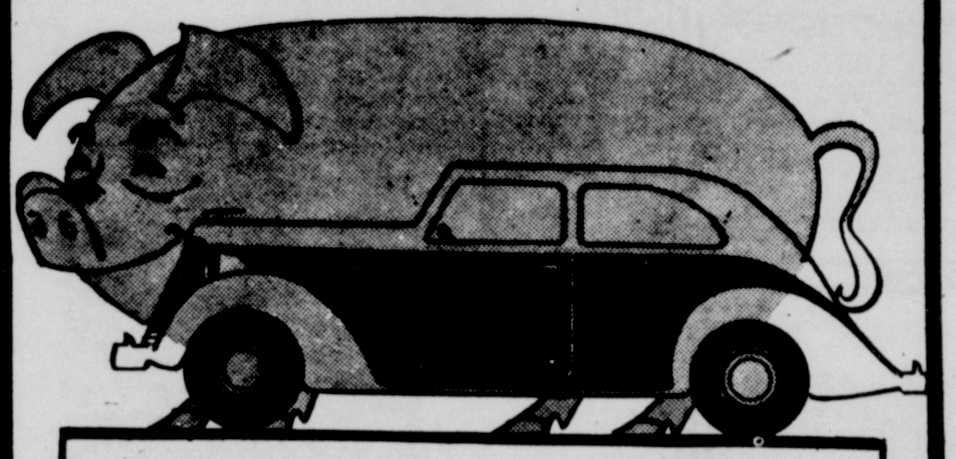

There is an easy way to unlock bumpers should your car get tangled up with another vehicle.

Drive the right side of the lead car, dragging the other one along, up on the curb, making sure the driver's side wheels of the lead car continue at street level.

By the time the right rear wheel of the lead car mounts the curb, the bumpers will unlock—if you avoid dragging the wheels of the rear car up on the curb.

Is it possible to double the mileage obtained from a gallon of gasoline? Such expectations may seem out of reach for most motorists, but evidence exists that such fuel savings are possible.

A car owner in Dallas, Tex., brought his vehicle in for an emissions and fuel economy test. When his undermaintained car was examined in "as is" condition, gasoline usage was measured. After the car was completely tuned up, it was retested for fuel economy. A 55 per cent improvement in fuel economy was realized.

Cars so badly out of tune that they wasted half of their fuel supply were detected in national fuel economy tests.

Potential high

While this saving is hardly typical, it is not inconceivable. Add to engine condition other maintenance items and the manner in which the car is driven, and the potential to save fuel is enormous.

According to the experts, many factors can cost you at the gasoline pump. Shell Oil Company states that underinflated tires can lose a mile a gallon in fuel economy. A malfunctioning choke can cut mileage by 30 per cent as well as lead to engine damage. A clogged air filter can penalize a motorist 10 per cent in fuel consumption, Shell states.

In addition to ignition system deterioration (plugs, points, wiring, etc.), other mechanical factors affect fuel consumption adversely. These include misaligned wheels, maladjusted automatic transmission, brake systems that "drag," improperly operating cooling system (including thermostat), stuck heat riser valves, malfunctioning fuel pump and worn piston rings.

Car operation important

Engines operating at idle get no miles per gallon. So avoid needless idling. Warming up an engine on a cold morning is a waste of time and gas. As soon as the engine is running smoothly, proceed at a moderate speed. Also, when waiting for long periods of time, shut off the engine.

If your engine should flood, do not pump the accelerator. Instead, crank the engine steadily until the car starts.

In manual transmission cars, get to high gear as soon as possible. First gear uses about 30 per cent more fuel than second, and second uses 15 per cent more fuel than third.

Avoid jack rabbit starts. A driver who tromps on the gas pedal uses four times as much fuel as the feather-footed motorist.

Other fuel-wise maneuvers include avoiding sudden stops and starts necessitated by following other vehicles too closely; get out of the lane-hopping habit and keep good control of the car when cornering and climbing hills.

Drive sensibly

And perhaps the most effective gasoline-saving maneuver of all. Drive at sensible speeds. Traveling at 80 m.p.h. is not only against the law. A car at 80 m.p.h. consumes 25 per cent more gas than one going only 50 m.p.h. Shell claims most efficient mileage is achieved at about 28 miles per hour.

19 hold out

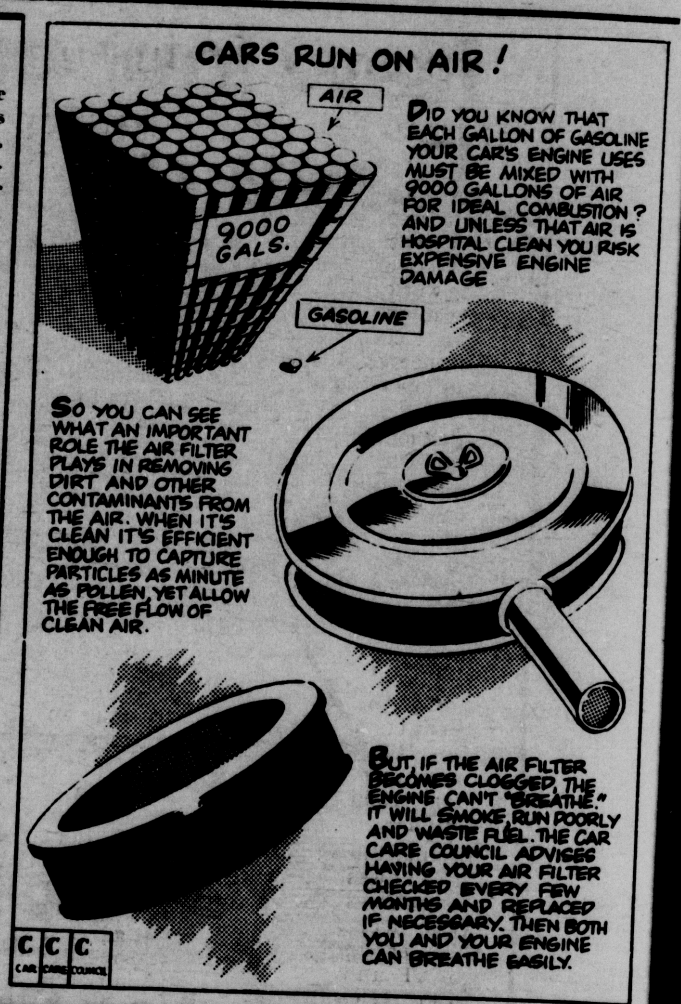

Periodic motor vehicle inspection (PMVI) is practiced in 31 states. States not having mandatory safety inspection for all cars are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin.

In a check of cars all over the country, it was learned that more than one car out of every four was at least one quart low on its oil supply. Low oil levels can cause serious engine wear.

Resistance of wiring needs check every time the engine is serviced

A sparking spark plug, if it were linked to a resonant antenna, could create a radio signal that could be heard around the world. Ordinarily, this fact might be of interest only to trivia fans, broadcast engineers, or former spark gap operators.

But due to the phenomenal growth of the Citizen's Band radio usage in cars and trucks, the radio signal emitted by the spark plug and the ignition system is of unusual interest.

R.F.I. Defined

Now that the CB radio literally is becoming the nation's conversation piece, the initials R.F.I. take on a new importance. R.F.I. stands for radio frequency interference.

R.F.I., as the name implies, is the "static" noises emanating from sources on or within the car itself. These noises can interfere with reception of CB and conventional radios, television and other communications media.

Most cars and trucks are suppressed by the manufacturer to provide satisfactory reception in conventional AM and FM receivers. However, amateur radio, citizen's band and other types of two-way communications systems may require additional and more efficient suppression.

The high voltage ignition circuit (the unit that actually fires the spark plug) is potentially the worst R.F.I. offender. To minimize the possibilities of R.F.I. from this circuit, ignition cables are usually of the resistor type. These suppressor cables use resistance type conductors rather than metal wire conductors at their core.

Also commonly used in R.F.I. suppression are resistor-type spark plugs. Resistor plugs contain an element that greatly reduces radiation from ignition cables and virtually eliminates the high frequency of the spark.

Maintenance important

To keep CB reception and transmission at its most efficient level, maintenance of the ignition system is important.

Of prime importance is the condition of the spark plug wires. Long usage, engine temperature, vibration and rough handling can lessen their R.F.I. suppression ability. So when the engine is tuned, wires should be given a resistance check. Wires should ordinarily be replaced when resistance value approaches three times the original value.

Also important is how ignition cables are handled. When working with them, twist, then pull at the plug boot, not the cables themselves. Cables should not be cut to attach suppressors or connectors. Usually cables cannot be repaired satisfactorily, but should be replaced when damaged — preferably the entire set of cables.

* * *

PLUGS — Worn spark plugs, with wide gaps, require higher ignition voltage. When this condition exists, the ignition system will radiate higher levels of interference as well as hamper engine performance. Installing new resistor plugs will help relieve the situation.

* * *

DISTRIBUTOR CAP AND ROTOR — Erosion of the rotor also can affect the distributor cap segments and can cause additional R.F.I. Such erosion increases the gap which the ignition voltage must jump and causes higher interference levels and poor performance. Should the rotor and cap become worn, replace them.

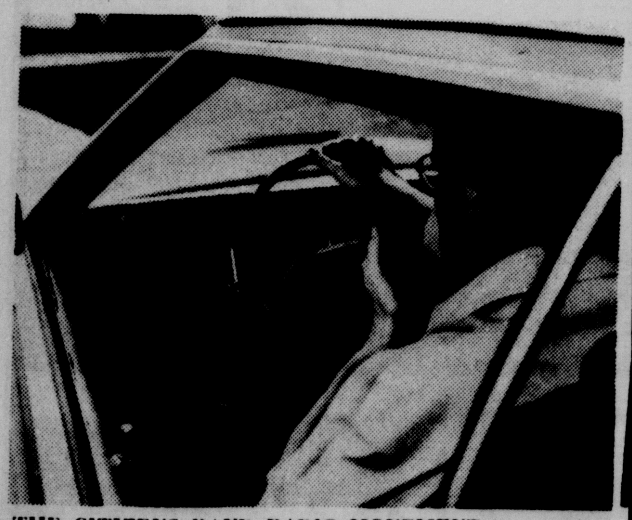

* * *

TIGHT CONNECTIONS — Poor connections at locations like the spark plug terminals, coil and distributor towers, hamper suppression and engine performance. Connections should be checked for tightness as part of a tune-up.

CHECK THE OIL level: as easy as it is important. Locate the oil filler stick. Extract the stick from the engine and wipe it off with a rag. Reinsert the stick as far as it will go and extract it again. Most sticks are calibrated with marks stating FULL or ADD OIL. The oil should leave a residue on the stick at the FULL mark. If it is at ADD OIL or below, then bring the supply to the proper level. When checking oil, make sure your car is on a level surface. Transmission and power steering fluids are similarly checked. Locate their check points from your car owner's manual.

Traffic jams are not new. But the nameplates on cars stuck in jams have changed over the years.

THE CITIZENS BAND RADIO MOVEMENT is sweeping the nation. Being made legendary by hit recordings, CB is more than a device to avoid speeding tickets. In some communities CBers are serving as traffic condition spotters. In any case, proper engine maintenance is important to good sending and receiving quality.

When storm blocks vision it's time to say, 'let there be light'

"My pet gripe," said the old-timer, "is against all too many drivers who have developed bad driving and maintenance habits."

This old-timer says he found himself trapped on a fine, broad turnpike by a sudden and severe bad weather condition.

"I say 'trapped' because traffic was heavy and too many motorists were high-balling far above the 55-mile speed limit when the storm broke.

"Naturally, I turned on my lights immediately. I wanted the car behind me to realize I was ahead of him, no matter how badly forward vision was impaired by the mounting darkness and the foglike mist created by the heavy rains.

Too many failed

"But too many others failed to do likewise (why, I will never know) which meant that frequently all you saw ahead of you that might be a motor vehicle was a slightly darker shape in the wet gloom.

"Meanwhile, if the guy in back of you didn't have some light showing forward, you'd have to strain to make sure he wasn't engaged in dangerous tailgating.

"It was almost impossible to turn off the turnpike with any degree of safety — turnoffs were jammed and motorists were speeding by.

"Another hazard was cars that had run out of gas or had encountered some mechanical difficulty which forced them to stop at roadside. Then, in a misguided effort to save their batteries, they didn't even show parking lights.

Never a breakdown

"I've never, during all of my driving in good weather and bad, had to stop because of a mechanical breakdown, or being out of gas.

"This 100 per cent performance, I attribute to the fact that every car I've ever owned has been taken in for a tune-up and a complete check of all safety features at every 10,000 miles that shows on my odometer.

"I got through the 135-mile drive during a vision destroying storm safely until, off the turnpike and very near my home, I was stopped by a red traffic light at the bottom of a little hill.

"Yes, it was raining heavily and my lights, front and back, were still on. Seconds after I stopped, the car behind me ran into my rear end.

Other car suffered

"Fortunately for me, the impact caused only minor damage to my car. But the other car suffered a punctured radiator.

"The driver behind me admitted he had seen the traffic light change and my car, with rear red lights showing, come to a gentle stop.

More than brakes

"It wasn't only your brakes, I suggested to him, it was the way you drive and take care of your car.

"Automobiles today are efficient machines with lots of good safety features built into them; but they can be no better, no safer, than the person who drives them."

DON'T MAKE WAVES

Don't make waves on the highway or your car may hydroplane out of control. A car moving too fast in rainy weather can build up a wave of water between the tires and the pavement.

GIVE IT THE AIR

If your car has an air conditioner, don't let it remain completely idle in winter. Let it run occasionally a few minutes at a time so the freon can circulate and keep the system "freed up."

Improper maintenance costing motorists dearly in economy, air quality, performance

More than 45 million vehicles in the United States show evidence of improper engine maintenance and are therefore wasting fuel, excessively polluting the air and otherwise performing poorly.

Based on tests already conducted by Champion Spark Plug Company on more than 4,500 cars in 20 cities, 42 per cent of all vehicles in the U.S. would not meet the newer emissions standards proposed in New Jersey, the only state with emission inspections now in full effect.

While the vehicles that didn't attain New Jersey standards were less than half of all cars tested, they emitted more than 63 per cent of the total carbon monoxide and nearly 64 per cent of the total hydrocarbons measured in the idle sampling.

Improvement noted

According to David L. Walker, Champion's Director of Automotive Technical Services, "On a nationwide basis our preliminary finding is an average 11.7 per cent improvement in fuel economy after tune-up in cars that were overdue for the service. In several cars, fuel savings of more than 50 per cent were recorded after a tune-up."

Mr. Walker added that all cars tested in the U.S. are showing at idle a 40 per cent post tune-up reduction in CO and 53 per cent lowering of HC emissions.

One car in 20 was diagnosed as a "gross emitter" thereby exceeding 10 per cent CO and 2000 p.p.m. HC. Mr. Walker added, "While these cars are only a small per cent of the total sample, each one of them spews about 13 times the pollutants into the air as a well-maintained, late-model car.

Three year survey

"That's why we support the Environmental Protection Agency's call for mandatory emissions inspection in areas with air quality problems."

The Champion fuel economy and emission tests are part of a three-year survey being conducted in 30 communities identified by the Environmental Protection Agency as having air quality problems.

New cars cleaner

The Champion tests revealed that the current-year models are emitting considerably less CO and HC than older models. Due to low-emission equipment installed by the manufacturers, new cars emit about half the pollutants as the average for all pre-1975 cars.

According to Mr. Walker, "The dramatically lowered hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions recorded in newer vehicles point to the progress manufacturers are making in cleaning up the air.

"The trend to cleaner air should continue since normal auto scrappage rates will continue to eliminate older, less efficient vehicles from the total U.S. car population," Mr. Walker said.

Results of motorists' neglect

The result of motorists' lack of maintenance was indicated by their own specific complaints about their cars' performance. In interviews prior to putting their vehicles through the check lane — 43.7 per cent complained of rough idle.

In addition, 41.8 per cent noted hesitation upon acceleration, 28.9 per cent reported run-on (failure of the engine to stop after the ignition is turned off). Also 21.7 per cent said they had engine knock (detonation) and 14.7 per cent complained about misfire.

These need attention

Items needing maintenance as noted by Champion engineers included air filters (34.5 per cent), battery (20.4 per cent), tires (14.1 per cent), belts (19.1 per cent), hoses (10.9 per cent) and exhaust systems (7.8 per cent).

Test results include cars checked in Toledo, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Toronto, Montreal, Kansas City, Dallas, Houston, Chicago, San Antonio, El Paso, Phoenix, San Diego, the Los Angeles area, San Francisco, Fresno and Sacramento.

Know how to use safely

Doing your own automotive work can save you time and money, but it also can bring you a lot of misery if you don't adopt a professional attitude toward repairs, according to the National Safety Council.

Many do-it-yourself repairmen, according to NSC Traffic Department Manager Don Lhotka, make a critical mistake in using a bumper jack to support their vehicles while they do wheel or undercarriage work.

* * *

1. Make sure the jack platform is on a smooth, level surface and the shaft of the jack is perpendicular to the ground. Position the bumper hook properly according to your car-owner's manual, and make sure the lock is in the full-up position before attempting to raise the car.

* * *

2. Press down on the service brake and then set the emergency brake. This will lock all four wheels. Then shift into "park" on automatic transmission vehicles or "reverse" on manual transmissions.

* * *

3. Keep children and pets away from the work area.

* * *

4. If you're changing a tire, loosen the lug nuts before jacking the wheel off the ground. This will make it easier to unfasten the nuts. In addition, a sharp pull on a lug wrench while the car is on the jack could cause the vehicle to fall. When replacing the tire, semi-tighten the lugs while the wheel is raised. Finish the job when the wheel is on the ground.

* * *

5. Jack slowly to avoid shaking the car.

* * *

6. Check to be sure nothing is under the car before lowering it to the ground.

5. BRAKE FLUID supplies must be adequate to assure safe stopping. If a spongy pedal or other condition makes you suspect the adequacy of the supply, you can check the level by examining the reservoir usually located near the engine's rear. Use a screwdriver to pry the compartment open.

Drivers learn to save on fuel; pollution levels diminished; accidents are reduced

By AL ROTHENBERG

The energy crisis has been no bargain, but some good may come out of it. Perhaps it already has, as many safety leaders trace a decline in the highway accident rate to energy-forced lower speed limits.

The Automotive Information Council points out higher petroleum costs and fears of future shortages could also make the public more favorably inclined toward motor vehicle inspection. An efficient engine that meets emission standards delivers more miles to the gallon and a regular inspection is the best way to determine if the standards are being met, AIC claims.

Thirty-two states and the District of Columbia now have periodic motor vehicle inspection (PMVI). The number has been virtually constant since the dawn of this decade. Voluntary programs were the vogue during the '50s and half of the '60s but PMVI generated little support because of a lack of data to show that vehicle condition was a key safety factor.

Solid evidence

Today, there is solid evidence that defective vehicles have figured prominently in accidents causing deaths and injuries:

- Nebraska reported 10 per cent of fatal accidents involved faulty vehicles prior to PMVI in 1968 and 5.6 per cent in 1972 after PMVI.
- Department of Transportation (DOT) said brake problems alone account for 1,600 to 3,000 deaths a year.
- Institute for Safety Analysis estimated defective vehicles were involved in more than 5,000 deaths and 200,000 serious injuries annually.

Until the passage of the Clean Air Act in 1970, safety was the only purpose of PMVI. Now, an inspection system is vital for another reason, the air we breathe. Except for the state of New Jersey and a limited number of communities, the emissions inspection program is still on the launch pad.

As the law now reads, two agencies of the Federal Government are responsible for periodic inspections — the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), for safety; the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), for emissions. The Automotive Information Council says that administration of PMVI should be given to one agency, pointing out that inspection for safety and emissions could be completed at one time. Certainly, that would be far more convenient for the owners of more than 100 million vehicles in operation.

Huge daily savings

Perhaps the program would gain even greater acceptance if it were called "fuel economy inspection" or "engine efficiency inspection" with the emphasis on saving gasoline and money. DOT conservatively estimates that inspection could save 375,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

1. A PRESSURE GAUGE is a wise investment to keep tires in good condition. Easy to use, the gauge will give you the tire pressure reading in pounds per square inch. Say the recommended tire pressure is 28 p.s.i. A reading below that figure means tires are underinflated and thus are wasting fuel, wearing improperly, and risking blowout. A reading above the norm means tires are overinflated, which can be equally damaging. Find the proper reading by coupling the top part of the gauge with the air filler valve on the tire. Air escaping from the tire will actuate the scale on the gauge. This tire registered 35 pounds, indicating overinflation. Perform the check in the morning, before tires have traveled.

- EPA gave 70 cars loaded emission inspection and after adjustment recorded an 8.4 per cent dip in gas consumption.
- Champion Spark Plug Company, in nationwide emission and fuel economy tests, found on average an 11.7 per cent fuel economy improvement after needed tune-up. One car in every 35 is so poorly maintained that it wastes from 20 to 33 per cent of its fuel.
- Gulf Oil tested 120,000 vehicles over a year, found 23 per cent of the cars with inefficient engines. The company estimated the average test car wasted as much as 140 gallons of fuel a year, or nearly $100 at today's prices.
- New York City ran an inspection program on 1,200 taxis, found a substantial reduction in hydrocarbon (HC) and carbon monoxide (CO) emissions and fuel savings up to 10 per cent after corrections.

When CO levels are excessive, it means poor carburetion. Some causes: too much fuel in the mixture, low idle speed setting, inoperative choke, clogged filter. High HC usually comes from an ignition problem. Causes: ignition timing advanced or retarded too much, poor condenser, worn out spark plugs, low battery voltage, vacuum leaks.

Make it nationwide

Of course, improper carburetion and ignition waste gasoline. Couple that with the facts that show PMVI saves lives and there is every reason to believe that America is ready for an across the nation vehicle inspection program including emissions of at least once a year.

All New Jersey car owners must submit their vehicles to annual emissions inspection as part of their overall vehicle checks. In a survey made of motorists in the Garden State, only two-and-a-half per cent stated objections to the program. Maybe that is because New Jersey emissions officials estimate a car can save $80 in gasoline bills a year when it is brought into good tuned-up condition.

Try it. You'll like it.

A stomach relief medication made that line famous several years ago. The sentiment seems to carry over to certain areas that have emission inspection programs.

Surveys conducted in New Jersey and Riverside, Calif., among motorists whose cars are inspected for emissions show popularity for the pollution-reducing, gas saving checks. When motorists in New Jersey, the only state with compulsory emissions inspection and compliance statewide, were queried about their experiences, the rate of unfavorable responses was low.

According to one New Jersey environmental protection spokesman, "We sent out questionnaires to 23,000 persons who had their cars inspected. Only two and a half per cent had unfavorable comments about the inspection. While 92 per cent made no comment either way, five percent went out of their way to praise inspection."

Of those who had to have cars repaired because they failed emission tests, the majority paid less than $25 for the correctional work, the survey showed. New Jersey clean air officials estimate an annual $80 saving on fuel when the car is properly tuned.

The Riverside inspection program enjoys a 92 per cent approval rate from motorists surveyed. Seven per cent rated the inspection program as "fair" and only one per cent said it was "poor." The tests, which are voluntary and performed at no charge, result from an experimental pilot program mandated by the California state legislature.

Of the 30 per cent of the cars that failed to meet standards, one-third of the motorists repaired their cars for a retest. Average repair cost has been $18 to $28.

Motorists in all 50 states can now find mechanics who can fix their cars right by checking a newly published directory of garages that employ competent mechanics. These mechanics have been tested and certified by an independent, non-profit organization, the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

The new 1976 edition of "Where to Find Certified Mechanics for Your Car" lists 9,500 automotive repair establishments. The listings are by city and state and include new car dealerships, independent garages, service stations, specialty shops, mass merchandisers, and body and paint shops.

To order a directory send a check or money order for $1.95 to NIASE, 1825 K Street, Suite 515, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Not all employers of certified mechanics are listed. To assure that only those who currently employ certified mechanics are listed, employers must make application every year. This is for the consumer's protection.

OPERATING AN ENGINE performance tester is no job for a neophyte. The blue, orange and white patch on the jacket of this technician shows he is certified by the NIASE as a competent mechanic. The new NIASE directory lists 9,500 service outlets nationwide that employ certified mechanics.

NIASE has been testing mechanics' competency by means of written tests for almost four years. To date, almost 100,000 mechanics have been certified in one or more areas of competency. The Institute offers tests in eight automobile systems such as tune-up, automatic transmission, front end, and brakes. The tests are developed and administered by Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J.

The energy crisis has been no bargain, but some good may come out of it. Perhaps it already has, as many safety leaders trace a decline in the highway accident rate to energy-forced lower speed limits.

The Automotive Information Council points out higher petroleum costs and fears of future shortages could also make the public more favorably inclined toward motor vehicle inspection. An efficient engine that meets emission standards delivers more miles to the gallon and a regular inspection is the best way to determine if the standards are being met, AIC claims.

Thirty-two states and the District of Columbia now have periodic motor vehicle inspection (PMVI). The number has been virtually constant since the dawn of this decade. Voluntary programs were the vogue during the '50s and half of the '60s but PMVI generated little support because of a lack of data to show that vehicle condition was a key safety factor.

Solid evidence

Today, there is solid evidence that defective vehicles have figured prominently in accidents causing deaths and injuries:

- Nebraska reported 10 per cent of fatal accidents involved faulty vehicles prior to PMVI in 1968 and 5.6 per cent in 1972 after PMVI.
- Department of Transportation (DOT) said brake problems alone account for 1,600 to 3,000 deaths a year.
- Institute for Safety Analysis estimated defective vehicles were involved in more than 5,000 deaths and 200,000 serious injuries annually.

Until the passage of the Clean Air Act in 1970, safety was the only purpose of PMVI. Now, an inspection system is vital for another reason, the air we breathe. Except for the state of New Jersey and a limited number of communities, the emissions inspection program is still on the launch pad.

As the law now reads, two agencies of the Federal Government are responsible for periodic inspections — the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), for safety; the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), for emissions. The Automotive Information Council says that administration of PMVI should be given to one agency, pointing out that inspection for safety and emissions could be completed at one time. Certainly, that would be far more convenient for the owners of more than 100 million vehicles in operation.

Huge daily savings

Perhaps the program would gain even greater acceptance if it were called "fuel economy inspection" or "engine efficiency inspection" with the emphasis on saving gasoline and money. DOT conservatively estimates that inspection could save 375,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

1. A PRESSURE GAUGE is a wise investment to keep tires in good condition. Easy to use, the gauge will give you the tire pressure reading in pounds per square inch. Say the recommended tire pressure is 28 p.s.i. A reading below that figure means tires are underinflated and thus are wasting fuel, wearing improperly, and risking blowout. A reading above the norm means tires are overinflated, which can be equally damaging. Find the proper reading by coupling the top part of the gauge with the air filler valve on the tire. Air escaping from the tire will actuate the scale on the gauge. This tire registered 35 pounds, indicating overinflation. Perform the check in the morning, before tires have traveled.

- EPA gave 70 cars loaded emission inspection and after adjustment recorded an 8.4 per cent dip in gas consumption.
- Champion Spark Plug Company, in nationwide emission and fuel economy tests, found on average an 11.7 per cent fuel economy improvement after needed tune-up. One car in every 35 is so poorly maintained that it wastes from 20 to 33 per cent of its fuel.
- Gulf Oil tested 120,000 vehicles over a year, found 23 per cent of the cars with inefficient engines. The company estimated the average test car wasted as much as 140 gallons of fuel a year, or nearly $100 at today's prices.
- New York City ran an inspection program on 1,200 taxis, found a substantial reduction in hydrocarbon (HC) and carbon monoxide (CO) emissions and fuel savings up to 10 per cent after corrections.

When CO levels are excessive, it means poor carburetion. Some causes: too much fuel in the mixture, low idle speed setting, inoperative choke, clogged filter. High HC usually comes from an ignition problem. Causes: ignition timing advanced or retarded too much, poor condenser, worn out spark plugs, low battery voltage, vacuum leaks.

Make it nationwide

Of course, improper carburetion and ignition waste gasoline. Couple that with the facts that show PMVI saves lives and there is every reason to believe that America is ready for an across the nation vehicle inspection program including emissions of at least once a year.

All New Jersey car owners must submit their vehicles to annual emissions inspection as part of their overall vehicle checks. In a survey made of motorists in the Garden State, only two-and-a-half per cent stated objections to the program. Maybe that is because New Jersey emissions officials estimate a car can save $80 in gasoline bills a year when it is brought into good tuned-up condition.

Studies show clean air tests liked in Jersey and California

Try it. You'll like it.

A stomach relief medication made that line famous several years ago. The sentiment seems to carry over to certain areas that have emission inspection programs.

Surveys conducted in New Jersey and Riverside, Calif., among motorists whose cars are inspected for emissions show popularity for the pollution-reducing, gas saving checks. When motorists in New Jersey, the only state with compulsory emissions inspection and compliance statewide, were queried about their experiences, the rate of unfavorable responses was low.

According to one New Jersey environmental protection spokesman, "We sent out questionnaires to 23,000 persons who had their cars inspected. Only two and a half per cent had unfavorable comments about the inspection. While 92 per cent made no comment either way, five percent went out of their way to praise inspection."

Of those who had to have cars repaired because they failed emission tests, the majority paid less than $25 for the correctional work, the survey showed. New Jersey clean air officials estimate an annual $80 saving on fuel when the car is properly tuned.

The Riverside inspection program enjoys a 92 per cent approval rate from motorists surveyed. Seven per cent rated the inspection program as "fair" and only one per cent said it was "poor." The tests, which are voluntary and performed at no charge, result from an experimental pilot program mandated by the California state legislature.

Of the 30 per cent of the cars that failed to meet standards, one-third of the motorists repaired their cars for a retest. Average repair cost has been $18 to $28.

Motorists in all 50 states can now find mechanics who can fix their cars right by checking a newly published directory of garages that employ competent mechanics. These mechanics have been tested and certified by an independent, non-profit organization, the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

The new 1976 edition of "Where to Find Certified Mechanics for Your Car" lists 9,500 automotive repair establishments. The listings are by city and state and include new car dealerships, independent garages, service stations, specialty shops, mass merchandisers, and body and paint shops.

To order a directory send a check or money order for $1.95 to NIASE, 1825 K Street, Suite 515, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Not all employers of certified mechanics are listed. To assure that only those who currently employ certified mechanics are listed, employers must make application every year. This is for the consumer's protection.

OPERATING AN ENGINE performance tester is no job for a neophyte. The blue, orange and white patch on the jacket of this technician shows he is certified by the NIASE as a competent mechanic. The new NIASE directory lists 9,500 service outlets nationwide that employ certified mechanics.

NIASE has been testing mechanics' competency by means of written tests for almost four years. To date, almost 100,000 mechanics have been certified in one or more areas of competency. The Institute offers tests in eight automobile systems such as tune-up, automatic transmission, front end, and brakes. The tests are developed and administered by Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J.

Fuel savings increase overall for motorists who heed advice

Yet three out of four vehicles show at least one defect adversely affecting fuel economy

The human mechanism has one particularly marvelous feature. No matter how severe a pain is created by illness or mishap, once the body has recovered there is no tangible recollection of the hurt. Physical scars may remain, but the intensity of the pain itself is forgotten.

The above-stated fact may help illuminate what has been happening to the attitude of the motoring public in recent days. Seemingly slipping from our consciousness is the spectre of the gasoline shortage that haunted us only a matter of months ago.

Likewise, the air quality problem that had a nation in near turmoil in the 1960s has been put on our mental back burners. (After all, haven't the auto companies "saved us" by producing more economical, cleaner burning cars?)

Improvements built into new cars

It is true, the car makers have made remarkable strides in building cars that give more miles per gallon and emit less pollutants.

But the facts show that the discomfort caused car owners by scarce gasoline at increasingly higher prices and the cost of pollution and poor performance is repressed into the darkest corners of our consciousness.

Proof of the contention — what car makers are accomplishing by making better cars is being undone by the car buyer — can be found in measurements of public attitudes and practices.

What nationwide tests show

For example, a nationwide test program of motorists' maintenance habits shows a continuation of sloppy maintenance practices. Three cars in every four show at least one defect that adversely affects fuel economy, emissions or performance. And the defects are due to lack of good maintenance.

YET NEVER IN THE HISTORY OF CAR OWNERSHIP HAVE GOOD CAR HABITS BEEN SO LUCRATIVE TO THE OWNER:

Years ago, when fuel cost less than 30 cents a gallon, even a 10 per cent savings in fuel was not too alluring! Today, such a savings can amount to hundreds of dollars annually.

The price of cars is climbing steadily. While it has always been true that the automobile, next to the house, is the second largest purchase the average person makes, some of today's cars cost what a small house used to cost. Therefore, car care is a form of protection of a sizeable investment.

Potential for high return

Along with higher new car prices, used cars have zoomed in price. The potential for getting a high return for a used vehicle has never been greater — especially when that vehicle has been well cared for.

There is no better time to get into good car care habits than the fall and winter season.

* * *

- There is more stop and go driving which is draining on fuel economy and on the ignition system. So a tune-up is a smart investment . . . not only for gas saving reasons but for surer starting.
- Slippery streets and highways demand sound brakes, shocks, tires and steering.
- Longer hours of darkness mean visibility is challenged by misaligned, non-functioning lights, cracked and dirty glass or worn wiper blades.
- Extremes in temperature mean cooling systems must be in top shape.

Salt, the kind that is used to melt ice on highways, can eat through a car's metal work, destroying the vehicle. So can the salt contained in sea spray. When salt from these sources is allowed to remain on the car for extended periods of time, deterioration occurs rapidly.

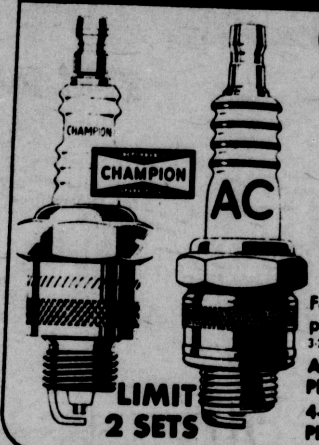

Wintertime in most regions is the most dangerous period for a car's appearance. Cars should be washed more frequently in winter with close attention to hard to reach surfaces such as the underside.

Those little nicks and dents should be tended to at this time since salt has a particularly powerful effect on damaged surfaces.

How to avoid this

THERE ARE WAYS IN WHICH motorists can avoid the trouble, discomfort and embarrassment of calling for towtruck help during cold weather, suggests the AAA in advice below.

Precautions one should take to avoid no-starts

AAA advises motorists to take a few simple precautions to assure that cars will start.

- Keep cars in a garage if possible.
- Motorists who do not have a garage should park the vehicle with its back to prevailing winds and its hood against a building. Place a blanket over the hood.
- Before starting car, make sure headlights, radio and other electrical accessories are turned off.
- To start car, turn on ignition, depress accelerator once, then let it up half way (or follow instructions in the owner's manual).
- Don't keep starter turning over for more than 10 seconds at a time.
- Never "pump" the accelerator. This will flood the engine.
- If the engine is flooded, shut off ignition, push the accelerator all the way to the floor and hold it there one minute. This procedure allows excess gasoline to drain through the manifold, with enough fuel remaining to provide a proper start.
- Keep car well-tuned and the battery charged and filled.

Keeping car longer? Here's what to watch

You've owned your car almost three years and it is practically paid for. Now you are debating whether to trade it in for a new one or hold on to it for a while longer.

If you have been maintaining your car regularly, chances are there is still lots of life left in it. However, if your maintenance has been hit or miss, then you should give your vehicle a bumper to bumper and roof to tire tread physical at your favorite service outlet.

Use the following check list to determine the condition of your car. If you decide to hang on to it, make certain these items are in good condition to assure yourself of continued worry-free, safe performance.

Check:

- ☐ Battery and cable
- ☐ Condition of tires, both tread and side walls
- ☐ Transmission linkage
- ☐ Condition of brakes
- ☐ Condition of shock absorbers
- ☐ Exhaust system
- ☐ Cooling system including radiator hoses, cap and thermostat
- ☐ Belts
- ☐ Wiper arms and blades

In addition, make sure these routine maintenance services have been performed recently:

Also, if there are nicks and bumps in the car, have them repaired.

Check tires if mercury drops

When a sudden cold spell hits, remember to check your tires' air pressure. For every 10-degree (F) drop in temperature, a tire may lose a pound of pressure. Harder steering, tire wear and gasoline mileage loss may result.

Are you scuffing?

When shoes scuff you may not be walking properly, and when tires scuff they, too, may not be aligning properly. The alignment of your wheels in relation to the direction of travel should be checked if you're "scuffing," suggests the Tire Industry Safety Council.

No. One victim of neglect

Number one victim of car neglect is the battery cable and terminal, shown here. According to Car Care Council, this part is most overlooked of all preventive maintenance services and parts. Spark plug wires and radiator hoses run a close race for second place.

Neglected components cause avoidable woes

How long has it been since you've asked someone to take a look at your car's wiring or radiator hose? It may have been quite a while, if you are typical of car owners reported in a poll of 370 automotive repairmen.

The survey, conducted by Car Care Council, shows many motorists tend to ignore battery cables, spark plug wires, radiator hose and pressure cap until failure has resulted.

Especially vulnerable are the connections on the battery itself. Corrosion which accumulates on these surfaces can restrict the flow of current from the battery to the starter, resulting in symptoms similar to a weak or dead battery. Car Care Council recommends having these terminals removed, cleaned and covered with a protective coating at least twice a year.

Books to order on car care

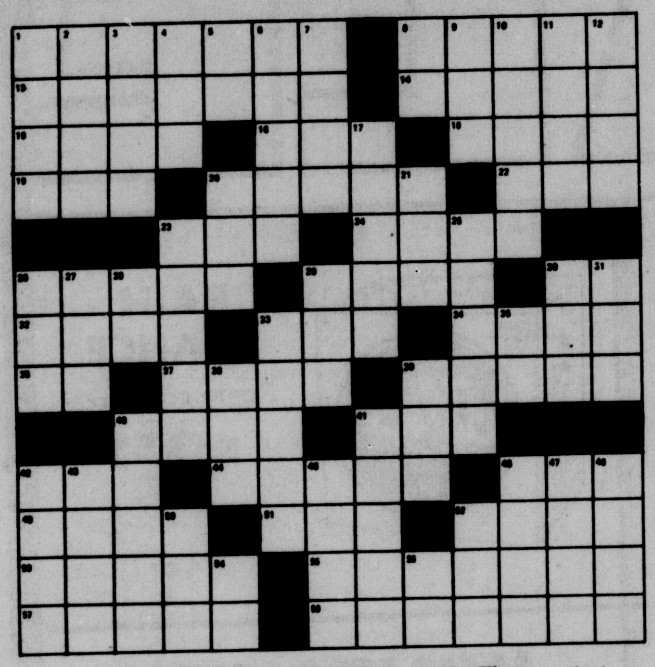

A small treasury of tips on operating automobiles is available at minimal cost from the U.S. Government. In the U.S., check the nearest Federal Office Building for copies or write to the Government Printing Office in Washington, D.C.

Among the titles available for purchase are Automobile Batteries: Their Selection and Care (20 pp. 65 cents), Antifreeze/Coolant (8 pp. 35 cents), Gasoline: More Miles Per Gallon (12 pp. 35 cents), Three Rules for Maximum Tire Life (9 pp. 25 cents), Tires: Their Selection and Care (28 pp. 90 cents), and What to Buy in Children's Car Seats (16 pp. 35 cents).

Too much weight is bad for tires, too, says the Tire Industry Safety Council. Check owner's manual for your vehicle's weight limitations to prevent overload and possible emergencies which could lead to tire disablement.

FILL IT UP — Learning to pump gasoline is becoming a common need for the average motorist. About one-third of all fuel is being sold at self-service stations these days.

SAFE DISTANCE

Traffic safety experts recommend maintaining one car length between vehicles for each 10 miles of speed. In other words, at 50 miles an hour, stay five car lengths back.

Some still survive

The names of companies that have built automobiles in North America run in the hundreds. While only a handful of these firms survives today, the memories of the majority which have fallen by the wayside linger.

As a tribute to these pioneers and as a reminder that good maintenance has allowed some of the original cars to survive today, this verse is dedicated.

Now we may wonder where they are.
